Plea For Action On Bus Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has been urged by Senate leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott to act swiftly on President Nixon's proposal to stop court-ordered school busing.

Mansfield and Scott made their appeal yesterday after Nixon called on Congress to approve a moratorium stopping court-ordered busing until mid-1973. He said Congress should use the period to legislate strict desegregation guidelines for the courts that stress neighborhood school attendance and forbid busing except as a last resort.

The President proposed outlawing busing under any circumstances for children in the sixth grade or below. He coupled the plan with a request for $2.5 billion in existing education aid funds to improve inner city schools as a substitute for wholesale busing.

The White House said response by telephone and telegram to Nixon's plan—first outlined Thursday night in a radio and television address— "has been very good." But it continued to draw criticism, both from blacks and some white Southern congressmen.

Rep. Shirley Chisholm, DN.Y., the first black woman to run for President, said Nixon's proposal was "final evidence of his desire to shut the door to racial equality in this nation."

"If Mr. Nixon ever claimed that he was entitled to the support of black Americans he lost that claim by calling in effect for a return to a plantation society for the entire nation," Mrs. Chisholm said.

Earlier Clarence Mitchell, chief Washington lobbyist for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peopge (NAACP), said his organization would challenge any law pased by Congress in the courts. He predicted the NAACP would win a court test.

Rep. Charles H. Griffin, D-Miss., said the fact that existing desegregation decrees would not be disturbed under the Nixon plan meant that "busing stops at the Mason-Dixon line."

"Southern states under forced busing orders would keep on busing while, at the same time, busing would be prohibited in the North and West," Griffin said.

Mansfield, the Democratic leader, and Scott, the GOP leader, urged a House-Senate conference committee on higher education to write Nixon's moratorium proposal into their bill.

"It appears to me that there isn't a great deal more that the courts can do and perhaps in some instances they have gone entirely too far," Mansfield said. "It appears to me there's

WARM WEATHER HIJINKS

Amid a swirl of water and water-filled balloons, students at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo celebrate the coming of warm weather. Target of this splashing at the campus lunch hour yesterday was a mini-skirted co-ed, only one of many doused during recent hot days. Wisps of fog and a breeze cooled off the mercury today, but the forecast was for fair through tomorrow with highs in the low 70s, and sparkling clear visibility.

U.S. Bombers Destroy Red Antiaircraft Installation

Unit Fires On Unarmed Aircraft

SAIGON (UPI) — Air Force and Navy fighter-bombers destroyed a Communist antiaircraft site in North Vietnam that opened fire on an unarmed reconnaisance plane, the U.S. Command said today.

Military spokesmen in Saigon also said the baotlefield death count in the Vietnam War topped the one million mark with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong accounting for 80 per cent of the total.

Air Force spokesmen disclosed Air Force and Navy pilots destroyed or damaged 29 Soviet-built tanks along the Ho Chi Minh Trail network in Laos March 3-8.

The command said the Communist gun site was located 15 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) and 10 miles from the Laotian border. Spokesmen refused to say how many planes participated in the strike—the 94th so far this year—but pilots said they destroyed the emplacement.

Major ground action tapered off today following five days of heavy fighting, but 31 clashes, mostly minor skirmishes, were reported. The only major battle was a fight 17 miles southwest of Hue which left 55 Communists and seven South Vietnamese dead.

Military deaths so far in the Vietnam war include slightly more than 800,000 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese, 151,190 South Vietnamese, 45,663 Americans and 4,739 from other countries. No figures were given for civilian deaths.

Air Force spokesmen showed photographs of five tanks hit by the pilots and said a total of 15 were destroyed and 14 others damaged. The total was the highest since U.S. planes knocked out scores of North Vietnamese armored vehicles during an American-backed drive into Laos last year.

The spokesmen said there were two types of tanks involved—PT76 amphibious vehicles with 76 mm guns and PT54-55 with 100 mm guns.

They said the tanks were discovered in two areas—west of Ben Het, a former Green Beret camp in the Central Highlands 290 miles north of Saigon and farther north near Sepone, a key trail junction.

Intelligence officers said several months ago they feared the Communists would use tanks to try to overrun Den Ben Het, where U.S. warplanes fought off 10 Communist tanks in 1969.

In search operations in Cambodia Friday and today, South Vietnamese troops uncovered Communist storage areas containing 110 tons of rice and small amounts of gasoline and otmer supplies.

The South Vietnamese command also said it had added 2,000 fresh troops to its 50,000-men task force pushing into eastern Cambodia to try to break up a reported Communist attack on Saigon.

The troops were dropped into rice paddy country north of Kampong Trach, 85 miles northwest of Saigon, and told to sweep south.

U.S. Expected To Remain Cool Toward North Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Despite Washington's dramatic change in policy toward Peking, the United States plans no corresponding easing of tensions with two of China's neighboring Communist states, North Korea and Mongolia.

President John F. Kennedy envisioned major Asian initiative that would have involved diplomatic recognition both to assert U.S. reasonableness toward Asian Communist nations and of Mongolia, possibly to provide a valuable listening post in Ulan Bator to report on developments within the closed Chinese mainland. But this project aborted with his assassination in 1963.

Now that President Nixon has achieved what Kennedy could never have at that time —the beginning of a dialogue with Chinese leaders —the matter of undertaking an opening in Mongolia appears to have been cast aside as lacking its former significance.

An improvement in relations with North Korea is another, much more complicated matter.

In recent weeks there have been signs that Pyongyang might welcome a thaw. A spokesman for the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan, a pro-North Korea group, hinted March 6 that Pyongyang would welcome "expanded relations and an end to our confrontation with the United States."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, at a news conference the next day, said the United States sought to improve relations with all countries and that this could include North Korea.

But a week later, on March 15, Rogers signalled that the United States would continue a hard line toward North Korea by refusing to lift State Department restrictions on American travel there. Instead of continuing the ban for the usual six months, Rogers extended it for a year.

State Department officials say that despite their sweet words, North Korea shows no sign of softening its hostile attitude toward South Korea, which the United States is committed to defend.

If the North Koreans really wanted to improve relations with the south and with the United States, they said, they could dismantle their 50-mile-long fence in the Demilitarized Zone in violation of the agreement ending the Korea war.

The United States, carrying out the Nixon Doctrine of disengagement overseas, reduced its troop strength in South Korea from 64,000 to 43,000 men during the 1970-71 fiscal year.

No further U.S. troop reduc-

San Rafael Gets Nibble On Courthouse Property

The City of San Rafael may have a nibble on the old courthouse property.

McKeon Construction Co. of Sacramento will make a presentation to the city council Monday on what the firm might propose for the downtown site.

City Mgr. James H. McCown said Monday's discussion will be "merely a first showing of a proposal by an interested developer."

The proposal would have to be studied carefully before any council action could be expected, McCown said.

He said McKeon's proposal calls for a "five or six" story office building, "a fair amount of open space" and a "two or two-and-a-half" story parking structure on the Fifth Avenue side of the square.

The courthouse annex, which survived a spectacular fire last May 25, would be torn down for the parking structure, McCown said.

He said there had been no talk of price with McKeon, but the Marin County Board of Supervisors set a minimum price of $750,000 when it approved an option agreement with San Rafael, giving the city the power to act as sole agent in selling the county-owned courthouse property.

The city council, which will meet at 8 p.m. at city hall, again will take up a request by the Monte Marin Homeowners for a building moratorium on 170 acres of undeveloped land on the Pimentel Ranch and in the San Rafael Park area, south of Lucas Valley Road.

The council March 6 postponed action on the moratorium request and directed the homeowners association to meet with property owners to determine if an assessment district plan was financially feasible to preserve the areas as open space or parkland.

SPOTLIGHT IS ON GARDENING

With the spring season scheduled to make its debut on Monday, today's special issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is a timely one — devoted to gardening.

Readers will find the I-J's weekend supplement enlarged to include a bonanza of special stories, pictures and advertisements of keen interest to those who practice Marin's most popular hobby, gardening.

Memo Is Hoax Says ITT Lobbyist

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Lobbyist Dita Beard has labeled a forgery and a hoax a memorandum attributed to her by columnist Jack Anderson which linked a corporate political contribution to the settlement of an antitrust suit against the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

Mrs. Beard, lobbyist for ITT, issued a "sworn statement" from her Denver hospital bed yesterday. It was telephoned to Washington and distributed by Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott.

"Mr. Anderson's memo is a forgery and not mine," the statement said. "I do not know who did prepare it, who forged my initial to it, how it got into Jack Anderson's hands or why. But I repeat, I do know it is not my memo and is a hoax."

Replying to her statement, Anderson said he had no doubt the memorandum was authentic. He said Mrs. Beard acknowledged the memo was authentic when she was confronted with it Feb. 23 and that she went over it "line by line, word by word" the next day in her home with Brit Hume, Anderson's investigative reporter.

"The only explanation I can give is that she is 53, divorced, has five children and hospital bills to pay," Anderson said. "She is at ITT's economic mercy. Either ITT has told her or

Maoists Threaten To Destroy Soviet Jets

PARIS (UPI)—Police said today a radical group of Maoists who kidnaped a motor company executive March 8 has threatened to blow up Soviet Aeroflot jetliners unless the airline pays $526,316 (two million Swiss francs) in ransom.

Police at Orly Airport said the threat was made in a letter which arrived yesterday at the Soviet embassy. It was signed by the Pierre Overney Organixation.

Police said guards armed with machine guns have been placed around Aeroflot planes at Orly and Bourget airports near Paris. And all passengers and their luggage are being searched.

Aeroflot said an Ilyushin 62 jet left Orly today at noon (6 a.m. EST) after its 140 passengers were searched.

The letter gave no motive for choosing the Soviet airline but the pro-Moscow French Communist party strongly critized the kidnaping of Robert Nogrette, the chief labor negotiator for the state-owned Renault Motor Company. Nogrette was released unharmed 48 hours later after public protest to the kidnaping grew.

The organization is named after a member of the group who was shot and killed in a demonstration outside the Renault plant Feb. 25.

As ransom for Nogrette, the kidnapers demanded the rehiring of several workers fired for taking part in the demonstration and the release of others who were jailed.

$1 Million Bail In Heroin Case

HONOLULU (UPI)—U.S. Magistrate Harold Sullivan set bail at $1 million yesterday for a man accused of trying to smuggle heroin into the United States from Thailand.

In arguing for the high bail, U.S. Attorney Toshio Suyematsu said Andrew Price, 44, is involved in "a national or international ring" of narcotics smugglers.

Price, manager of a Bangkok bar and restaurant, was arrested Thursday by U.S. Customs agents following his arrival at Honolulu International Airport from Thailand.

Woman Delivers Seven Children; None Survive

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (UPI) —Seven children were born Friday to a woman who had taken fertility drugs, but none of them survived their first 15 hours of life.

A boy and a girl were born stillborn. Two boys died several hours later and three girls died early today.

The two tiny infant girls with the best chance of survival had been shifted to the Stanford University Medical Center and placed in womblike "isolettes" in a desperate attempt to save their lives.

The septuplets all weighed between 1 1-2 and two pounds and were born about 2 1-2 months premature, said Dr. Anthony Damore, who was in charge of the deliveries.

"It was like Grand Central Station when we were delivering the babies," Damore said. "On the average, five to seven personnel are involved for each baby put into intensive care."

Damore said the parents agreed that details of the multiple birth at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center could be given out, but they requested anonymity.

He said the couple was in their late 20s, lived in the San Francisco Bay area, and the wife had been his patient taking fertility drugs for four years.

The parents' names, however, will become public record when the births are recorded with the county next week.

The 36-year-old doctor said the mother had tried various fertility drugs without success until the drug Pergonal was used.

"It was obvious almost from the beginning that we were going to have multiple pregnancy. We did have X-ray confirmation of probably five babies. We did deliver seven," the doctor said.

He said the most children he had ever delivered before was two.

"It's kind of a different thing for an individual to deliver seven babies like this. You don't do it every day," he said.

Swallows Returing To Capistrano

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI)—To the birds, it may well appear to be human beings who "return to Capistrano" so regularly every St. Joseph's Day.

The swallows, celebrated in romantic song and legend, have already begun their return to the mission, the oldest existing structure in California.

And where the swallows come, not far behind come the crowds of swallow-watchers and tourists.

TomOrrow is St. Joseph's Day, the day when, according to tradition, the main body of the flock, more than 1,000 strong, swoops down from the south, ending its 3,000 mile journey from winter quarters in Argentina.

But there are already "about 200 birds on hand" according to a local swallow-watcher. "They've been showing up since Wednesday," he said.

Mission priests said the early birds were "scouts...who drive out some of the other birds who take over the swallows' places during the winter.

As many as 12,000 persons have turned out to watch the swallows return—and celebrate in the annual Swallows Festival —in past years.

When the mission padres tolled the bells to announce the arrival of the flock two years ago, there were more than 4,000 watchers on hand, including about 500 who spent the night in campers.

The Swallow Festival includes contests, dancing and a parade. The priests of the mission, who try to keep the saint's day in religious perspective amid the ballyhoo, say special masses and have a pageant on the mission grounds.

Violence Erupts In Massachusetts Prison

WALPOLE, Mass. (UPI)— Hundreds of inmates roamed at will through Walpole State Prison for several hours late yesterday and early today, setting fires, smashing windows and destroying furniture before being driven back to their cells with tear gas.

One guard and one inmate were injured in the rampage.

"Things are now secure," State Corrections Commissioner John O. Boone told newsmen at 4 a.m. (EST) after he and Superintendent Robert Donnelly met with some of the prisoners.

As many as 500 inmates left their cells setting fires throughout the prison and causing heavy damage to the prison auditorium and library after a black inmate was stabbed about 9 p.m. The prisoners were back in their cells by 1 a.m.

"The damage is substantial," said Boone. Guards would comb the prison later today in a "shakedown" search for homemade weapons, he said.

Twenty-six guards from the Norfolk prison colony, a mile away, were rushed to the prison when the trouble broke out while 50 staff police stood by at a nearby barracks in Foxboro.

Donnelly said "there was extensive use of tear gas" by guards to quell the disturbance.

The injured guard was hit in the eye with flying glass. Three inmates and two other officers were treated for smoke inhalation, a spokesman said.

A spokesman, Mel Bernstein, said the disturbance apparently started when inmate Ronad Stokes was walking through cellblock two without a shirt. A guard stopped Stokes and told him to put on a shirt, but Stokes told the officer he had been stabbed. He then moved on to cellblock four while the guard sounded an alarm.

Bernstein said 30 black inmates left block four and went to block two where they met about 30 whites. A few fires were started, he said, and the Walpole fire department was called to the scene.

But by that time, Bernstein said, other fires broke out through the prison. The inmates were released from the cellblocks and about 130 of the 623 prisoners were herded into the gymnasium, where they remained without incident. The other roamed through the prison.

Stokes was admitted tg Massachusetts General Hospital in "fair and stable condition" with a single stab wound, Bernstein said.

John Barrymore Accused Of Pot

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—John Drew Barrymore, son of the matinee idol of the 1930s, was arraigned Thursday on a charge of posession of marijuana.

Municipal Judge Noel Cannon ordered a preliminary hearing April 24 for Barrymore, 39, an actor and writer, and Stewart A. Rice, 35, an actor. Both men were free on $1,000 bond.

Police said they found Barrymore and Rice at Producers Studios in Hollywood last Friday, with marijuana on the desk at which they were seated.

Barrymore was convicted of posession of narcotics in 1967 and placed on three years probation. He was arrested on similiar charges in 1966 and 1969.

Mental Patient Charged With Five Murders

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) —Benjamin Miller, a white 42-year-old mental pazient and lay preacher, was held without bail today, charged with the "bra murders" of five black women strangled mysteriously over a four year period.

Miller, a stocky, balding man who allegedly met the victims at churches and sidewalk sermons, was arrested Friday in Stamford where he was brought from a state mental hospital. State police said he had been under suspicion since last September, less than a month after the latest killing.

At least three of the victims were strangled with their own brassieres, police said. The bodies of all five women were found along the Merritt Parkway in Stamford.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Drug Briefing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal and New York state narcotics officials will brief President Nixon Monday on new efforts to crack down on the drug traffic.

Ronald L. Ziegler, White House press secretary, said Nixon will fly to New York City Monday morning and spend a few hours there. He is expected to confer with Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and with customs officials.

Resentencing

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal appeals court has ordered H. Rap Brown resentenced on a federal firearms conviction, ruling that the lower court judge who last sentenced the black militant had no right to do so in Brown's absence.

In its decision yesterday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals invalidated the five-year jail term and $2,000 fine imposed on Brown and returned the case to U.S. District Court Judge Lansing L. Mitchell of New Orleans for resentencing.

Mitchell sentenced Brown in 1968 for carrying a carbine illegally in travel between New York and New Orleans.

Malfunctioning

PASADENA (UPI) — Mariner 9, the Mars mapping satellite, circled the red planet with its cameras inactive and experiments shut down today as scientists on Earth tried to locate a malfunction.

The satellite has already accomplished the main goal of its mission-to map 85 per cent of the planet. Mariner has so far sent more than 7,000 photos back to Earth.

A spokesman for Jet Propulsion Laboratory, control point for Mariner, said technicians ran a routine check of the spacecraft by radio yesterday after it completed its 249th orbit.

Secret Talks

LONDON (UPI) — British Prime Minister Edward Heath and French President Georges Pompidou met in a secret "little summit" today to work out plans for a larger, united Europe.

The two leaders met at Chequers, the prime minister's official country residence, amid the tightest security since President Nixon visited Britain last year.

Some 200 demonstrators paraded in front of the building protesting Britain's planned entry into the European Common Market — the main topic of discussion at the meeting.

Boat Piracy

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Irvin R. Morris, 30, was charged with piracy yesterday when police found him wandering around below decks on the U.S.S. Constellation, the Navy's oldest ship, berthed in the Baltimore harbor.

A police captain earlier in the week had ordered that anyone caught on the ship, a national shrine, be prosecuted under the United States code for piracy, specifically, "piracy by trespassing on a ship on a navigable body of water."

Ends Soviet Talks

MOSCOW (UPI) — Pakistan President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto left Moscow today following two days of talks with Soviet leaders on problems of the Indian subcontinent, the Soviet news agency, Tass, said.

Premier Alexei N. Kosygin accompanied Bhutto to the airport for a ceremonial farewell, Tass said.

Tass said Bhutto's talks in Moscow dealt with "questions of Soviet-Pakistani relations, the situation on the Hindostan Peninsula and possible means of regulating problems that have appeared in this area."

Name It Casper

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 16, astronauts John W. Young, Charles M. Duke and Thomas K. Mattingly said yesterday they would fly to the moon next month in a command ship named for Casper the friendly cartoon ghost and a landing craft called Orion.

"It seemed like a cute little name, and there's enough seriousness in this business," said Mattingly, who chose the name Casper because astronauts have looked ghostly white in television pictures from the moon.

Blast off is scheduled April 16 from Cape Kennedy for the 12-day mission.

Jackson Refuses To Disclose Contributors To His Drive

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Sen. Henry M. Jackson is the first candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination to refuse to disclose the names of contributors to his campaign.

Calling earlier disclosures by Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay "grandstanding," Jackson said Friday that identifying his contributors would cause many to be fired from business and government posts.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace have promised to disclose the names of their contributors.

Jackson's decision announced at a news conference in Washington, D.C., came shortly after a spokesman for Muskie said the senator's campaign sources began drying up when he promised to reveal the identities of his contributors.

There was no apparent relation between the Muskie aide's statement and Jackson's decision.

Jackson said he was protecting the identity of his contributors because "I don't cave in just because some people panic."

On other campaign fronts, an election analyst said "the White House is up for grabs" in November. Muskie was advised to reduce the number of primaries he intends to enter, and Rep. Paul N. McCloskey's name will remain on the Republican primary ballot in Michigan.

McCloskey, who dropped his challenge to President Nixo last Friday, was declared a formal candidate Friday in Lansing, Mich. Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio, who is continuing his bid to wrest the nomination from Nixon, was not listed on the Michigan ballot for the May 16 primary.

Albert Gore, the Democrat who lost his U.S. Senate seat from Tennessee in 1970, said Muskie is spreading himself too thin. Gore, national campaign adviser to Muskie, said the Maine senator should reassess his tactics to prevent another poor finish such as in Florida's primary last Tuesday.

Richard W. Scammon, prominent election analyst, predicted at the National Press Club that the economy would be the top issue. He said Nixon would lose if it were bad, but would win if it were good.

Muskie and Wallace were heckled by youths. Muskie lectured his heckler at the University of Illinois declaring that, "You can hate me all you want, but the hatred you just expressed is the sort of thing that has always divided our country."

Wallace drew a crowd to a news conference in Austin, Tex., where he asked for support at the June 13-14 state convention and drew about 20 young hecklers who gave the Nazi salute and shouted "heil."

Original Member Of State Patrol Killed In Crash

LAKEHEAD, Calif. (UPI)— Charles F. Loomis, one of the original California Highway Patrolmen in 1929, has been killed in a traffic accident at the age of 80.

According to officers, Loomis joined the patrol when it was formed on Aug. 14, 1929. He served with the agency in San Luis Obispo County until his retirement in 1947 as a captain.

His badge number was 66, reflecting the fact that he was the 66th man to join the patrol.

The traffic accident occurred Thursday night.

$15,622 Received Under New Program

Marin and Sonoma counties have received $15,622 from a new state program encouraging collection of child-support from previously non-paying parents.

Counties retain 37 percent of their collections, to fund further collection work by district attorneys' offices under the Support Enforcement Incentive Fund program, according to a state officer. Marin received $122.32 and Sonoma $15,500.69.

MOST REWARDING

Five Girls Hit Circuit Entertaining With Guitars

By DICK SMULLEN

The child care center-nursing home circuit isn't one of the richest in the entertainment world, but it is one of the most rewarding for five San Rafael girls.

Although no money enters the picture, Stephanie Burton, Karen Haralson, Donna Rodriguez, Joan Rupiper and Shirley Clifford play in a guitar group that boasts a growing list of standing engagements in Marin County.

The program reflects a revamped attitude of the county chapter of the American Red Cross: volunteers don't have to mold themselves into the existing program, according to Nancy K. Hayden of the county chapter. She said virtually anyone with a skill can find a place to use it with the Red Cross.

The five eighth graders, all 14, are students at St. Raphael's Parochial School on Fifth Avenue.

They've been playing an average of four years. Stephanie began seriously five years ago; Karen, three; Donna, four; Joan, three, and Shirley, four.

The five took up guitar for vastly different reasons. Stephanie started because "the counselor at camp didn't have any other open class, so I had to play guitar." Joan said she would have played piano, "but it wasn't in tune."

Donna has two older brothers who play and Karen "just liked it," as did Shirley.

The idea for the group originated with Barry Coates, a College of Marin student. He went to the Red Cross seeking some form of volunteer work to earn credit for a behavioral science course.

In discussing ideas for various programs with Joanne Karlsrud, Red Cross youth director, Coates mentioned he was interested in playing guitar, and the musical group was formed.

Coates and Mrs. Karlsrud recruited the five girls in September, 1971. It was the first Red Cross volunteer work for each of the girls.

The group estimates it has a repertoire of about 18-20 songs. Last week they added two, "Old McDonald" and "Puff, the Magic Dragon."

Generally, they said, they do two types of music, slower, more soothing songs for the convalescent homes and simple sing-alongs for the children in the day-care centers.

Donna said of the two groups "The old people seem to appreciate it more, they're so lonely."

They have three standing engagements, at St. Raphael Parochial, the Novato and the Manzanita child care centers. They have also played in two convalescent homes.

The five say they'd like more engagements if they can get them.

Do any of the girls intend to use this as a springboard for a future entertainment career? Possibly one, Donna; the others say lawyer (Stephanie), nurse (Joan) and work with the mentally retarded (Shirley). Karen said she hadn't decided.

Trio Robs 7-11 Market of $300

Three men, one of whom brandished a gun, robbed the 7-11 market, 650 Redwood Highway, Strawberry, of nearly $300 Thursday night, according to Marin County Sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said the robbery occurred about 10:10 p.m. The men forced a clerk to lie on the floor as they made their escape.

Summer Students, Classes To Be Cut

Only about half as many students as last year will be able to take summer school courses offered at San Rafael High School this year.

And, due to a cutback in state funds, only about half as many courses will be offered, the schools office has announced.

Asst. Supt. Wayne D. Boone said yesterday the money cut actually came prior to last year's summer session, but that the San Rafael Board of Education decided to use reserve funds to cover a $25,000 deficit in the operation.

This year, however, the board balked at supporting a $23,000 deficit. The program was cut and the board last Wednesday approved a revised summer program with a deficit of $12,518.

The program will be able to accommodate only about half of the 1,100 students who took summer courses last year, Boone said, and the schools office has establihsed a priority list to determine which sludents will bet first chance at registering for summer session.

First priority will be given to students enrolling for driver training only or driver training and driver education. These programs, Boone said, are unaffected by the budget limitations because school districts are reimbursed for each student under a separate state funding arrangement.

For 21 other courses being offered, priority will be given in the following order: students who need makeup work to Graduate in June; those who need it to stay on schedule for graduation in June 1973; students entering 10th and 11th grades who need makeup work to remain at their class level; students entering 9th grade who need remedial work or review; those desiring additional or enrichment courses or who desire required courses to simplify their regular schedules during the 1972-73 school year, and students programmed for early graduation.

The summer session, which is switched each year between San Rafael and Terra Linda high schools, will be offered this year at San Rafael High.

It will open June 22 and close Aug. 4.

BUSING

not much more the President can do...but something has to be done and it appears to me the place to do it is in the Congress."

A national coalition of busing foes claiming 1.6 million members announced Friday it would shift emphasis from lobbying for a constitutional amendment banning busing to seeking the election defeat of 25 "big busers of America" in Congress.

Dr. Mitchell Young of Texarkana, Tex., president of the Unified Concerned Citizens of America, said his group would launch a drive to elect "those who favor neighborhood schools."

He said those marked for defeat included three Democratic presidential candidates, Sens. Edmund S. Muskie, Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern.

Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien said yesterday in Springfield, Mass., the Democratic Party might ask for equal air time to answer President Nixon's policy statement on school busing.

O'Brien, attending a St. Patrick's Day luncheon and a fund raising reception, said the President's request for $2.5 billion came after the Democratic Congress proposed nearly the same thing, only to have President Nixon oppose it.

Subdivision Developers Are Sued

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Developers of Mont Marin subdivision in Lucas Valley have been sued by the United States attorney for allegedly failing to pay the government more than $15,000 in tax withholdings.

Named as defendants are the American Housing Guild, Marin Master Builders, Peninsula Master Builders and several other affiliated corporations, with offices in Burlingame and San Diego.

The suit was filed Wednesday in federal district court by Asst. U.S. Atty. John M. Youngquist of Mill Valley, who is chief of the U.S. aotorney's tax division. Youngquist said that other corporations named as defendants include Sabot Development and Lightning Investment Co. of San Diego and Nicko Construction Co. of Burlingame.

The government charges that the defendants in 1968 supplied money to pay the wages of employees of the R. H. Harris Construction Co. Inc. of Novato, which contracted to build Mont Marin. The complaint alleges that the federal income and social security taxes withheld from the Harris employees' wages were never turned over to the government.

The complaint alleges that the developers are liable for $15,008 in withheld taxes, plus interest.

ITT

she has on her own decided that the way to protect herself is to repudiate the memorandum. I sympathize with the poor woman."

Mrs. Beard disappeared three weeks ago when Anderson wrote a column identifying her as the author of a memorandum that linked the settlement of a major antitrust suit against ITT with a $400,000 pledge by a subsidiary of the firm to underwrite San Diego's costs of hosting the Republican National convention. She later was located in Denver and has been undergoing treatment there for a heart ailment.

The controversy has been aired in Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on President Nixon's nomination of Richard G. Kleindienso as attorney general. Both Kleindienst and former Attorney General John N. Mitchell have denied any irregularities in handling the ITT antitrust case.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said it was "incredible, almost unbelievable" for Mrs. Beard now to deny that the memo was hers.

"If the memo was false, why didn't she deny it immediately?" he asked. "Why did we have all this passage of time?"

Bayh said the "latest plans" were to send a six-man subcommittee to Denver late next week to talk to Mrs. Beard. Hume said Mrs. Beard acknowledged the authenticity of the memo the first time he saw her and "she reconfirmed it in the strongest language when I met her at her home the following night.

"She said there was no use trying to say she didn't write it because, as she put it, 'of course I wrote it.'

"What's more, in the first meeting, she referred to the penciled initial on the document as 'my own little d,' and I'll never forget that as long as I live."

High Court Death Ruling To Be Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Supreme Court has reaffirmed its decision that the death penalty is unconstitutional, but modified its opinion on the right to bail in cases involving serious offenses.

Declaring its original Feb. 18 decision was now final, the court by a 6-1 vote Friday refused to reconsider its opinion as requested by State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger.

Younger then announced he was asking the U.S. Supreme Court to stay the effect of the decision. He said the state court had deprived the people of their right to have "duly elected representatives and executive officers" make and carry out laws "for the protection of the people's lives, liberty and property."

The California court ruled the 107 persons on death row would have their sentences modified by the sentencing court. They will be subject to life imprisonment with or without possibility of parole.

The court said that the question of bail was not an issue in its consideration of the constitutionality of the death penalty and that the decision did not affect the laws regulating bail.

The court therefore modified its original opinion to declare that in cases involving serious offenses that formerly carried the death penalty bail may be refused "when the proof of guilt is great and the presumption therof great."

Two Marin County businessmen were victims of armed robbers today and last night, law officers said.

Simontacchi was unable to free himself and was not found until 3 a.m. when his wife went to the bar to see why had had not come home, said Sheriff's Sgt. William Keaton.

Simontacchi said the men came in about 45 minutes before closing time and drank a few beers. When Simontacchi began to close the tavern, the bandits each drew revolvers, Keaton reported.

Novato Family Adjusts To New, Slow Pace: Peace Corps In Rabat

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Last August, the Sugiyama family of Novato left middle-income suburbia for a Peace Corps assignment in Morocco. In this account written by Phil Bernstein of the Peace Corps for the Independent-Journal, the Sugiyamas describe the adjustments and sacrifices.)

RABAT, Morocco — Youre doing the family laundry by hand when the repairman arrives to diagnose the death rattles of the 12-year-old refrigerator and you discover he speaks only Arabic.

Disaster? Perhaps for some American women, but for Jean Sugiyama, it's one of the minor hang-ups that make for colorful memories of a Peace Corps wife's life in Morocco.

Two years ago, Mrs. Sugiyama was enjoying the comforts of suburban living in Novato while her husband, Curt, 37, brought home a not unpleasant paycheck from his job as a social worker at Sunny Hills Childrens Center in San Anselmo.

But in November 1969 the lively mother-of-four learned the Peace Corps had lifted its restriction against volunteers with children. After a phone call to the San Francisco office, she persuaded her husband to apply as a volunteer.

When the Moroccan government requested a consultant for childrens mental health centers, the couple responded and traveled to the North African country last August.

"Curt underwent intensive instruction in conversational Arabic — 280 hours in the first three months," she recalled. "I'm afraid I'm still midway through a first-grade primer in Arabic."

The Sugiyamas and their children, aged 1 to 10, were housed temporarily in a moderately priced hotel in the heart of Moroccos capital, Rabat.

"Simple things — like feeding your family — become fantastically complicated in a country like Morocco if you dont speak French or Arabic, Mrs. Sugiyama said with a grimace.

"Shopping for food is something Ive taken for granted. But its not so easy when the market is the size of a bedroom closet and the customer is supposed to ask for the groceries he wants.

"We ate some very strange things until I learned some basic Arabic."

"Obviously, with four young children, we couldnt live in barracks-type accommodations offered single volunteers. Housing is scarce in Rabat and we were lucky to find this two-bedroom apartment.

"It has no heating system, the only room with hot running water is the bathroom and a washing machine — let alone a dryer — is unheard of. But we have two luxuries — a refrigerator and a servant.

When the Sugiyamas — both of whom hold master's degrees in social work from the University of Michigan — announced their plans to join the Peace Corps, they discivered a pattern in the reaction of friends.

"At first they said we had to be joking, Mrs. Sugiyama said. "Then they came up with a multitude of exotic problems that could arise in a foreign country. Lastly, they asked what they could do to help.

"I'm no Pollyanna," she said, "there have been very real obstacles to overcome. For instance, our three oldest attend a private school. Instruction is in French. If a child hasn't learned his lessons, he's punished physically. There is too much emphasis on rote learning instead of discussion. Therefore we try to supplement the curriculum at home.

"At home, our idea of a fun weekend was to go to Golden Gate Park. In Rabat, we walk to the souks (bazaars) of the casbah or stroll through the Phoenician and Roman ruins of Chellah or view the city from the 11th Century Hassan Tower.

Commented the soft-spoken Sugiyama, who is establishing training procedures for personnel of Moroccos 12 mental health clinics for disturbed juveniles:

"I think the experience has been in our favor to this point. The satisfactions have been more personal than professional because I've been in the process of becoming familiarized to a new environment.

"My job boils down to teaching good child-rearing practices within the sanctions of Moroccan values. The ultimate goal is to provide patients with occupational skills that will enable them to become viable members of their society.

"Sacrifices? I don't think living without a telephone, television or car can be considered deprivations. In terms of buying power, we've been limited to slowing down to think and talk and even read as many as eight books a month.

"We're no longer living in an electronic age, but a slower, more gracious period where a premium is put on traditions.

"The greatest contrast is the concept of time. We Americans have allowed the clock to become the greatest regulator of our lives. To save time is to save money as we plunge into the future.

"The Arab tends to contemplate the past, to treasure the glories when his culture flourished as the most advanced in the world.

"In the States, the individual's rights and freedoms are paramount. In Morocco, personal ambitions are secondary to the well-being of the family unit.

"I'm no judge as to which concept is best. But I am readjusting my thinking somewhere in between and I hope I can retain the same attitudes when we return to the jet-pace of California.

MOROCCAN DINING — The Sugiyama family, far from its Novato home, gathers at the supper table in Rabat, Morocco, where father and husband Curt Sugiyama, pouring soda to daughter Elysee at left, is on Peace Corps assignment. FROM COMBS TO CRYSTALS

New England Couple's Home Is Veritable Hobbyist's Museum

By DIANE CASSELBERRY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

MARBLEHEAD, Mass. — Bill and Maureen Taus's home is a collector's dreamland. You can hardly take off your coat in the alcove entranceway without knocking over a polished geode or two.

In the living room carved African elephants gaze down from their mantel perch at a table-turned display-case filled with Florida seashells.

Wooden shuttles from a New England mill hang next to sea-blue Danish tiles in the kitchen. The counter space all around is crowded with crystallized rocks and minerals.

Old-fashioned prints in magnificent gilded frames practically paper the stairway leading to the second floor bedrooms. And there, stashed in cardboard boxes under an imposing four-poster, is a collection that would drive a barber to wearing wigs: more than 2,500 antique combs and hair pins.

The comb collection belongs to Mrs. Margaret Kimball Herlihy, Mrs. Taus's mother. She first started gathering them out of necessity. "My mother never let me cut my hair while I was growing up," she explains.

And Mrs. Herlihy has been letting her hair grow and wearing combs ever since.

"SO MANY YOUNG people today don't even know what a hair comb is," she says reaching up unconsciously to straighten the caramel-colored comb she usually wears. "I remember some boys who stopped me once in the middle of the Boston Common to find out what kind of funny little hat I was wearing."

Mrs. Herlihy rummages through one of her boxes for a few seconds and comes up with a showy Florentine hair comb, several inches high and half a foot wide. "At least I've never worn anything that conspicuous," she said, smiling.

oShe reaches under the bed again, and pulls out the prize catch of one vacation expedition through Spanish what-not shops — a complete tortoise shell, polished to a pearl-like luster.

The underside, amber-colored plates of a turtle are the finest quality tortoise shell, and craftsmen from Paris to Peking were fashioning delicate barettes and combs from it centuries ago.

The earliest known combs date from even further back than that, however. They've been spotted in Egyptian paintings of 3200 B.C., and some were found in a Viking ship dating back to A.D. 800.

Mrs. Herlihy has collected hundreds of floral and feather-patterned hair combs over the years. Many of them were given to her as gifts by people who wanted someone to enjoy them. "Or," she explains, "I just heard about one and tracked it down."

BUT SOMETIMES combs weren't so easy to find. Spanish families have now taken the oldest and loveliest ones out of useums and shops to keep at home with other treasured heirlooms.

In Denmark, too, hair pins are as scarce as crabgrass in the Tivoli Gardens. It took Mrs. Herlihy two days and one helpful museum curator to locate any for sale there.

But still her collection is amazing in its geographic and composite range.

Pearl-studded jet barettes from Whitby, England, twinkle next to dark wood pieces from the depths of Africa.

Several metal combs from Czechoslovakia are set with precious stones no longer mined in that country.

There's even a dull black comb stamped, "Goodyear, 1851."

Mrs. Herlihy regularly packs up her combs and dusts off her anecdotes to go lecturing.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have listened to her tell about the 12-piece sets of bonnet pins, side combs, and hair pins that Florentine fashionettes used to hold their pompadours in place.

Mrs. Herlihy also describes the first comb factory in America, started in 1739 in West Newbury, Mass., by Enoch Noyes:

A Hessian soldier pooled his tools and German training with Mr. Noyes's capital, and the two men went from farm to farm, collecting cow horn to use as a substitute for expensive imported tortoise shell.

BECAUSE HER mother never let her cut her hair, Mrs. Margaret Kimball Herlihy began her comb collection out of necessity. Here she displays fanciful antique combs in preparation for her lectures she gives on antique combs. (Christian Science Monitor photo)

But horn was not as durable as shell and soon disintegrated.

"AMERICAN COMBMAKERS must have oought up turtles by the ton," Mrs. Herlihy states, but still they couldn't compete with French or Spanish artistry.

Tortoise shell gradually became too expensive for even the Europeans to buy and process, and styles also started changing. "Hair combs moved with cycles of popular tastes," says Mr. Herlihy, "and when women began to cut their hair, that was the end of them."

Mrs. Herlihy spends a lot of her time now writing to foreign embassies and museums for information she plans to use in a book about head decorations of the past and present.

And she enjoys sharing her combs with other people who collect lots of other things.

"Often I'll mention something in a lecture that starts people thinking about their own family histories — about stories of Uncle Fred's stamp collection or something like that," says Mrs. Herlihy.

"I think that's what really interests us all — the stories and anecdotes behind whatever we collect."

'THE BEST LIFE'

Liza Reflects On Her Famous Mother

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Liza Minnelli, once reflecting on the tumultous life of her mother, the late Judy Garland, said that "She had the best life. She got it all."

"When she was happy there was no one like her," Miss Minnelli told me. "She was never bored. She was always at the pinnacle...happy, she was at the peak. Depressed, she would be way down.

"I think that when Mama decided she'd done everything, she just stopped. Just stopped. I'm sure though that in heaven she's shaking hell out of the place."

MISS MINNELLI thought for a moment and then paid a rare tribute to a mother—"She raised three level-headed kids."

Miss Minnelli's reflections on Judy Garland's abbreviated life (she died at 47) were spoken one afternoon as we sat in the Minnelli hotel suite while she was filling a supper club engagement.

They come back with full force today for two reasons. For one, Liza, then already well on her way, now promises to develop into a show business phenomenon like her mother when you consider the rare notices she got in her new movie, "Cabaret."

For another, there's published this week a book about Miss Garland, written by her fifth husband, Mickey Deans, musician and filmmaker. He was with her when she died June 21, 1969, in their London home. The official ruling: accidental death from an "incautious" dose of barbiturates. Deans, with novelist Ann Pinchot as co-author, traces a soft and compassionate reprise of Miss Garland's life in "Weep No More, My Lady" (Hawthorn).

THERE IS the description of Miss Garland's ups and downs with pills and her efforts to get off them. And there is no bitterness, no castigation of any of Miss Garland's former husbands—David Rose, the musician-conductor; Vincente Minnelli, the brilliant director and Liza's father; Sid Luft, the theatrical producer-agent and father of Lorna and Joey (both performers also), or Mark Herron, the actor.

LIZA MINNELLI
Reflections on Judy

Miss Minnelli has made no comment on the Deans book, her New York representative told me. The elfin actress, who greatly resembles her mother, is taking a rest break in California, gearing for a television special—"She's like her mother, she has this great affinity for performing for an audience," her representative said.

Deans pictures Miss Garland as "always completely objective about her reputation as a superstar." She was proud, persistent and self critical about her career, but Deans says she also was vulnerable, thin-skinned and sensitive about the people in her life.

JAMES MASON, Miss Garland's co-star in the movie "A Star is Born," eulogized her at funeral services not only as a fine performer but as the "most sympathetic, the funniest, the sharpest, and the most stimulating woman I ever knew."

Miss Minnelli, recalling her own upbringing, said, "My parents wanted me to do what I wanted to do." Would she have made stardom had she not been her mother's daughter? I asked.

"I know I'm good," she said, "and I've worked very hard. It may have just taken a bit longer."

Yes, she gets repeated requests from her audiences to sing her mother's famous "Somewhere over the Rainbow." She refuses—"I tell them, it's been done so perfect' ly. . ."

Pianist Hambro Enchants A.M. Series Audience With Anecdotes

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Pianist-comedian Leonid Hambro enchanted his audience at yesterday morning's fifth program in the Family Service League's A.M. Series at the Veterans Memorial Building with his playing and hilarious anecdotes.

It was fun with music, indeed, as Hambro, whose looks and speech are somewhat reminiscent of a younger Hubert Humphrey, told his wildly funny stories of boo-boos of famed musicians like pianists Schnabel and Horowitz and enacted the role of a young boy at a piano recital.

All this was to be expected from the pianist, who was with Victor Borge for 10 years, but his musicianship and technical prowess were impeccable.

This, too, was not surprising since he was staff pianist with the New York Philharmonic for 14 years and is now the assistant dean in charge of the classical music department of the new California Institute for the Arts at Valencia.

Hambro's performance was, in fact, just as entertaining and far more musically satisfying than Borge's, for Hambro does not leave his audience frustrated with bits and pieces of fine music hammed up for comic effect.

He chose as completely-performed numbers a program of sure-fire technical dazzlers and lyrical melodies. These were Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso, Chopin's Etude in E Majar and "Minute Waltz," which the pianist said is actually the minute (small) waltz.

Others were Listz's "Sonetto del Petrarch No. 104" — in tribute to "the many ladies present because it deals with all aspects of love;" Debussy's "Claire de Lune" and "Golliwog's Cakewalk"; and Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

Though I thought some passages were zipped off too fast in the interest of dazzling display, all of these numbers were brilliantly performed with "Claire de Lune" representing the finest lyrical style and Rhapsody in Blue (played in the original piano version), the most pyrotechnic.

Black Girl's Despair Leads To Flood Of Assurances

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I read with deepest sympathy the plight of "Not Kidding," the 16-year-old black girl whose despair over friendlessness and family problems was pushing her toward thoughts of suicide.

Then my eyes drifted to the other side of the newspaper page, and there in large black type were headlines about a local women's club "girl of the month" award. Talk about contrasts!

Granted this chosen girl is lovely, respected, deserving — a leader, most likely from a good family where love and acceptance abound. She deserves praise, but one more honor isn't the difference between life and death to her.

I couldn't help thinking as I read: How much greater the service would be if clubs throughout the country singled out girls like "Not Kidding" who have potential but no opportunities, gave them awards and encouragement, let them know there were people who would listen and help. If such a girl were invited out for an occasional lunch or weekend in a loving home; if townswomen acted as substitute mothers, teaching her how to sew, perhaps, or just how to relate to people — she'd throw that razor blade away.

Please understand, I'm not knocking awards to outstanding young people. I'm only suggesting that many more young people would be outstanding if the luckier members of the community discovered them in time, and showed them that someone cares. — MOTHER OF THREE

DEAR MOTHER OF THREE:

Thanks for a great suggestion! We hope club members all over the country will read and heed.

If each one of us from comparatively untroubled homes would reach out to a girl or boy who needs encouragement, a listening ear and, most of all, sincere friendship, we'll wager the juvenile crime rate would drop amazingly within a few years. Perhaps this "reaching out" might start with women's clubs. How about it? — HELEN AND SUE

DEAR READERS:

Many of you have asked, "What's the word on 'Not Kidding'?"

We're happy to report that she sent us her name and address, and so far we've delivered hundreds of your letters to her. They've helped! You can't know how much they've helped — because they've shown a lonely girl that so many people really do care.

This is her public thanks — for she won't be able to answer all her mail. She wants to share a couple of her many outstanding letters with you:

DEAR "NOT KIDDING:"

I have read your letter over and over, sensing the loneliness of a 16-year-old girl. It's been said that we'll be lucky to have one real friend during a lifetime. I mean, your loneliness and problems are not yours alone —they are shared by many other young people, and many hide them so well that no one knows. Try to find someone lonelier than you and help them through their rough period.

I teach Sunday School and part of our last lesson was on the fact that when things are rough, we're miserable but, actually, the rough things in life make us stronger and more able to endure. Our sympathy should go to the young person who has never known bad times, has always been completely protected, for life may deal him very hard blows when he isn't conditioned to withstand.

Please write to us. We'd like to welcome you as part of our family. — ANOTHER FROM YOUR HOME TOWN

DEAR "NOT KIDDING":

By way of introduction, may I explain that I am a white Doctor of Medicine, age 49, married to a black woman of 41. My wonderful spouse is a head nurse at one of our hospitals.

Believe me when I say that there are MANY humans interested in your plight! Your depression is understandable. How do you think my black wife (who is again pregnant) felt and reacted to residing in our staid white community? At first, she was at a loss in a place which three years ago would have completely rejected her and me as well.

But did she think of wrist-slashing? Or bury her head in the proverbial sand? On the contrary. At present, after two years of living here, she has developed a very warm, close and undying relationship with the "white folks" and is loved by all. I wish you could visit our home and experience for yourself what love is. — Dr. L.F.

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.)

How To Correct Tangling Of Thread

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I have the same problem I'm sure almost everyone else has — thread that tangles. In this day of progress, why do we have to put up with this problem? I find it maddening to have to stop nearly every inch of hand stitching to untangle the thread. If you have a remedy, please let us in on it.

MRS. MARGARET D.

DEAR MRS. MARGARET D.,

Several factors could cause this excessive tangling. Be sure the eye of the needle isn't too long. This causes the thread to become frayed and to tangle. Next, be sure to thread the needle from the end of the thread nearer the spool. It will cause much less of a problem if you use it the way it was originally twisted, not against the natural twist. Often women use a thread that is too long for hand work. Again the constant pulling in and out of your fabric will cause the fibers to weaken and tangle.

We have found through the last year of testing that there is nothing quite like 100 per cent polyester thread for all sewing, either machine or hand. It seems to adapt to all fabrics, silks, cottons, wools and synthetics. It has more elasticity than any other thread, but has one disadvantage. It's more difficult to rip. Try it. I think you'll be a convert, as I have become.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have been anxiously watching for some word from you about the length of skirts for this coming season. Also, how are they to be pressed?

MRS. B.L.S.

DEAR MRS. B.L.S.,

The length of skirts seems to be a dead issue. It's really up to you. The majority of women will choose a length somewhere about mid-knee, some slightly shorter, some slightly longer. The younger gals will continue to wear their skirts very short. The type of skirt you are wearing also has some effect on the length. If you have begun wearing the full soft skirts or pleated skirts that are so very new, they should probably be slightly shorter than straight skirts. It all depends on the way you feel about them personally. You must feel right. Other factors would be the style of the garment, your legs, and perhaps your age.

Most fabrics will not look best if the hem is pressed in too hard. A softer look is preferable. However, again it depends on the style of the garment. If the pleats are sharp pleats, a sharp hem is called for. If the fullness in the skirt is achieved by gathers or unpressed pleats, the hem should be rolled and not have a sharp, ironed look.

DEAR EUNICE,

In the area where I live, we really don't have a need for heavy wools for coats or suits, and yet the mornings and evenings do require a lightweight coat. I would like to make a coat at a local tailoring class, but wonder what type of fabrics you would suggest so that I may actually learn tailoring techniques without making a garment I would never wear?

MRS. T.M.DEAR MRS. T.M.,

No matter where you live in this country, there isn't any woman who can't use a lightweight, all-purpose coat, even though there are some areas where women need both a heavy as well as lightweight coat.

From the type of climate you describe, I would suggest you use one of the following: a firm, double or single-woven cotton. (Double-woven cottons are extremely versatile. They don't wrinkle, they don't require underlining for added shaping, and they are perfect for tailoring.) You could use a heavy Italian type silk or many of the other mixtures of fibers. Linen is great, but rather seasonal, whereas most of your lighter weight fabrics could do double duty no matter where you live for most of the year.

There has been a great return to raw silk, the type woven in India. There is also a new fabric available which I am very taken with, a silk and polyester mixture. There is also silk and linen, and many new fabrics that have a combination of fibers, highlighting the best feature of each individual fiber. Of course, for practicality you can always use 100 per cent polyester. So you see, your choices are many, and I'll guarantee that if you do a nice job of tailoring this is the coat you will wear and wear and wear and love each time you put it on. Be sure to choose an interesting texture, print, color. This too makes a vast difference.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Charles E. Reff of Watertwn, N.Y. —

"When slips get too short, and teen-age girls get old enough to want half-slips, cut the tops off, apply elastic and presto, happiness and a half-slip!"

"For added savings, look for remnants of nylon tricot or lightweight cottons, gather at the top and apply this to the old yolk for a new 'nightie.' The whole family enjoys these savings."

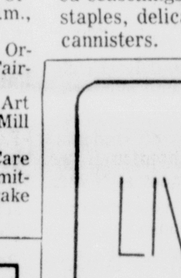
Wedding Cake Ornaments Out

NEW YORK (UPI)—Bride and bridegroom ornaments for wedding cakes are not done much any more, says the banquet manager of a lading restaurant here.

Many brides choose instead to decorate the cake with either a tiny vase of real flowers sunk in the center or bone china ornaments. Some select peace symbols.



"It's not unusual for a woman to feel that romance has gone out of her marriage, -- especially as she grows old and fat."

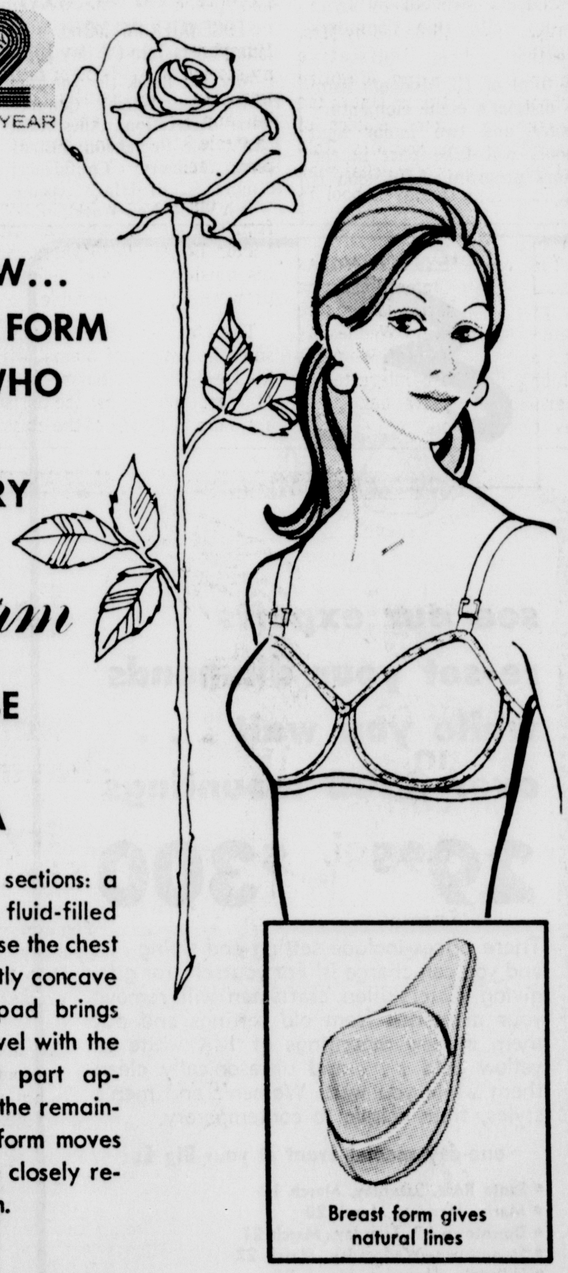
AT WARDS NOW... A NEW BREAST FORM FOR WOMEN WHO HAVE HAD BREAST SURGERY

StyleForm

DESIGNED TO BE WORN IN AN ORDINARY BRA

This new form is in two sections: a foam rubber pad and a fluid-filled form... important because the chest area often is made slightly concave by surgery. The foam pad brings that part of the chest level with the normal side; fluid-filled part approximates the curve of the remaining bosom. The breast form moves naturally with the body; closely resembles a natural bosom.



Breast form gives natural lines

We invite you to meet Miss Estelle Wood, Wards Fitting Specialist, in Wards Bra and Girdle Department on Monday, March 20, thru Wednesday, March 22.

New Policy Would Hike Bay Dredge

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — The cost of dredging in San Francisco Bay and its tributaries would soar under tough new regulations on spoil disposal to be considered Tuesday by the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The all-day hearing will start County Public Works Building, 399 Elmhurst Street, Hayward.

The board will consider adopting the regulations at its March 28 meeting, also at 9:30 a.m. in the same building.

The regulations would bar dumping dredged mud anywhere in the bay if found contaminated with heavy metals or toxic chemicals. Such spoils would have to be dumped either on land or in the ocean in depths greater than 100 fathoms. Both would make many dredging projects too expensive.

The wapiti received the name of elk from English settlers who came to Virginia and proclaimed him an elk — the name given the European moose.

Sonoma State Dean To Federal Post

Dr. Warren Tappin, associate dean of students at Sonoma State College has been named to a federal education post.

On Monday, Tappin will become director of higher education for Region Nine of the Office of Education, including California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaii, Guam, American Samoa and Micronesia. From the San Francisco office, he will be working with federal programs for post-secondary education including upward bound, search for talent and special services.

Tappin came to Sonoma State as associate dean of students for activities and housing in 1963. Nearly 100 persons gathered yesterday to honor him at a farewell luncheon at the Carriage House in Rohnert Park.

Tappin received his bachelor's degree from the University of Massachusetts, master's degree from Boston University and doctorate from the University of Washington.

Tappin has been involved in student and community relations and has been chairman of the Rohnert Park Model Cities Commission and a member of the Sonoma County and California State Republican Central committees.

Bagley Hits School Fund Court Ruling

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Republican assemblyman has warned that the state Supreme Court decision declaring the present method of funding public schools is unconstitutional and could lead to a "rip-off" of big cities.

Assemblyman William Bagley of San Rafael, chairman of an Assembly Revenue and Taxation Subcommittee hearing testimony on the case, said Friday he and others who hailed the decision last August have had "second thoughts."

He declared that under the ruling big city school districts, which are supposedly "wealthy" in the assessed valuation of their property, could be hit by even higher taxes in an effort to equalize education spending throughout the state.

The state Supreme Court last August declared the school finance system is unconstitutional because it relies too heavily on local property taxes. The court said this discriminates against children in districts with low property wealth.

Bagley's remarks were seconded by a witness at the hearing, David Kirp, a professor of law at UC Berkeley. He asserted big cities will "suffer more because on paper they are wealthy while in fact they are not wealthy."

Kirp also warned lawmakegs that they had no assurance that if they equalize the amount of money being spent by each district that the funds will be divided equally among the schools in the district.

He said that he believed legislators would discover that less money is being spent on schools attended by poorer students than on one within the same district attended by wealthier students.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

New Treatment For Facial Tic Reported By Doctor In Iowa

Tics are involuntary repetitious movements. Facial muscles are involved most commonly with winking, blinking, twitching, drawing of the mouth to one side, and nodding or turning of the head. Other victims shrug the shoulders, twitch a finger or take a short sniff before speaking. As a rule, the nervous habit is aggravated by excitement, embarrassment, fear or a concerted effort to control it. The spasms disappear during sleep and subside when the individual is relaxed.

The tics are more nerve-racking to the onlooker than to the victim. Once established, they may last a lifetime. Tics rarely occur before age 6 and some disappear spontaneously in childhood. Since most tics are due to underlying stress, it is of no avail to badger the child about the movements.

IRRITATION OF the nerves that control the muscle may result in spasmodic contractions of groups of muscles. These are not necessarily tics. Blepharospasm, for example, is an involuntary twitching of the eyelid due to local or distant irritation of the facial nerve. The condition may stem from an eye infection, refractive error, muscle imbalance, or defects in visual accommodation. Too much coffee, tea or tobacco may do the same.

A NEW treatment for facial tics and muscle spasms was reported by Dr. Brian F. McCabe of Iowa City. This physician dissects and cuts out the facial nerve and the branch controlling the twitching muscles. The muscles are now paralyzed and it is for this reason that before surgery, the person must decide whether he is willing to trade the spasms for a new appearance.

The technic is aimed at spasms involving the upper two-thirds of the face. In this way, the lips retain their full function so that the person can talk and drink from a glass.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

NIGHTLY BOWEL SPASMS

A reader writes: I would like to know why I'm awakened at night by bowel spasms.

REPLY

These spasms are caused by irritation or are on an emotional basis. We do not know why some people are plagued at night and others are bothered during the day. Our leaflet on irritable bowel can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with requrest.

14 EGGS A WEEK

A. C. writes: I am 64 and eat 14 eggs a week. Will this lead to a cholesterol problem? If so, should eggs be eliminated from a normal diet?

REPLY

Many people have had two eggs for breakfast every morning of their lives and lived to be 80. However, if your cholesterol level is high, limit the number to two a week.

COCKTAILS DURING PREGNANCY

L. S. writes: Is it dangerous for a pregnant woman to have a few cocktails?

REPLY

The moderate use of alcohol is safe for the woman who enjoys and tolerates a cocktail. Alcohol passes through the placenta; consequently, the amount should be limited strictly.

Injuries Are Minor In Accident

Three persons suffered minor injuries in traffic accidents yesterday in Marin, according to the California Highway Patrol and Marin General Hospital.

The hospital said Mrs. Guerin's condition was satisfactory today. The CHP report of the accident was not complete.

Cindy Hoag, 15, of 3 Harbor Drive, Corte Madera, was treated at the hospital for a cut chin from a motorcycle accident at about 2:30 p.m. Other details were lacking.

Paul J. Merrill, 18, of 9 La Crescenta Road, San Rafael, was treated for a cut right knee at 4:30 p.m. yesterday following a traffic accident, but there were no other details.

Pay Increase Measure Moves

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A $213.5 million pay increase ranging up to 12 1-2 per cent for state employes has been approved by an Assembly Ways and Means subcommittee.

Under the proposal, state employes would receive a 7.5 per cent boost and state college and university faculty members a 12.5 increase.

The amount approved Wednesday by the subcommittee was in accord with a recommendation by Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post.

The amount also was higher than the $135.8 million in salary hikes recommended by Gov. Ronald Reagan. Under the governor's proposal, civil servants would get a 5 per cent boost with faculty salaries going up 7.5 per cent.

Developing Of Today's Hand: An Old Principle Seldom Used

The principle used in today's hand is very simple but nobody seems to think of it. See if you can make four spades without reading the explanation. (If you want a clue, the basic idea is to make something out of nothing.)

A LOW CLUB

West opens the five of clubs, fortunately enough, and you win with the jack. You are in danger of losing a trick in each suit.

If you try to ruff a club in dummy, East will overruff. He will get out safely with a heart or a diamond, and you will still lose a trick to the king of trumps.

You would like to get to the dummy to finesse through the king of spades. Is thers any way to do so?

CREATE A RUFFER

The method is to create a ruffing trick in dummy.

Take the ace of clubs at the second trick and then lead the king of clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy. East ruffs and leads a diamond.

You step right up with the ace of diamonds and lead your last club, discarding another diamond from dummy. This gives West his ten or queen of clubs, but gets rid of dummy's last diamond.

RUFF IN DUMMY

Now you can ruff a diamond in dummy and lead a trump through East to pick up the king of trumps. The rest is easy.

This is an extreme example of the "loser-on-loser" play. You will find simpler cases in actual play if you just look for them.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with two spades (forcing to game), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 4
♥ - A 10 5
♦ - K J 7 2
♣ - Q 10 6 5 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs.

Find the best trump suit first and show the full strength later. If you can find a fit in any suit but spades, you will surely push on to slam.

Peking Buys New York Hotel

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Chinese mission to the United Nations with a current staff of only 45 persons has purchased a 10-story motel here which has 260 rooms and baths.

The announcement Thursday of the purchase of the Lincoln Square Motor In did not reveal the price but it was estimatted to be in excess of $4 million.

The eight-year-old structure has a rooftop swimming pool, a garage, facilities for conferences, a dining room seating 500 persons and, according to the motel's manager, "a nice spot on the lobby for some Ping-Pong tables."

Small Talk Among State's Legislators

SACRAMENTO — To spend an evening jawing informally with a group of legislators is to spend an evening in a forest of contradictions.

At some time in the conversation, each legislator seems called upon to say that he is not in the legislature for the rather generous pay and allowances he receives; he could make much more in business back home.

When the matter of legislators' pay was last on the ballot before the voters of California, however, we heard early and often from Sacramento that higher pay and allowances would attract higher calibre persons to seek the office.

SOME SENATORS and assemblymen will admit privately that they voted for recent moves to record votes and take action only in open meetings, not because they favored such moves but because they were afraid of public reaction to a negative vote.

In private, they argue fiercely in favor of closed door sessions to get down to the "nitty gritty."

In almost the next breath, they criticize newspaper and other media reporting of legislative news as too superficial; "it doesn't get down to the nitty gritty."

Legislators seem angry that our courts seem to have entered the legislative field more and more. They especially resent the California Supreme Court finding that the death penalty is unconstitutional. Measures for the repeal of the death penalty have repeatedly come before the people's elected representatives in Sacramento and just as often the death penalty has been affirmed. The courts, say legislators, should stay out of the lawmaking field.

On the question of reapportionment, the legislators take an opposite view: The legislature just is not able to redistrict itself; the courts will have to do the job.

WHY CANNOT the legislature redistrict itself?

As one observer put it, redistricting is not a matter of give and take. It is instead a matter of political life and death. No legislator will consent to a redistricting plan that eliminates his district or consolidates it with another represented by a strong senator or assemblyman.

While the legislators would have us lieve that they do us (the people) a favor by doing their legislative jobs, when tpat job is threatened, they'll fight for it as a matter of life and death.

The first time the state Senate was required to redistrict along one man-one vote lines a few years ago, the senators accepted the inevitable and decided to do the best they could, knowing that many old faces in the Senate would be eliminated. Under the leadership of Sen. Stephen Teale, a committee did a statesmenlike job. The whole senate accepted it, although it obviously was to lead to the departure of many.

Why cannot that be done again today?

The only rational conclusion one can draw is that there are an insufficient number of statesmen in the Legislature. None is willing to put the welfare of all above his own personal political aspirations.

Can it be that if they were paid less, they would be more willing to act realistically on reapportionment?

STREAMLINING the legislature is a favorite topic. Former Speaker Bob Monagan says it would work much better if there were but 12 committees. When Monagan was speaker, he couldn't cut it below 20. Now there are aoout two dozen.

Monagan explains it all plainly: cut down on the number of committees and you lose the votes of their chairmen. Since you need every vote you can get to retain the speakership, it is impossible to liquidate committees.

Bob Moretti's margin of victory in the speaker competition was small; he needs more committee chairman votes to hold onto his job.

The most painful thing you hear in a gabfest with legislators is the admission that there is too little legislation aimed at solving the state's problems, and too much legislative effort directed solely toward obtaining political advantage.

No wonder the Legislature takes so long and spends too much to do so little!

All in all, an evening spent jawing informally with legislators is a rather depressing experience.

Beauty in Diversity

Marinites are lucky. We can grow a wider variety of plants here than almost any other place in the U.S. Because our county has a large number of what the botanist calls "life zones," plants from varied climates all over the world grow here.

Variety is the spice of life and diversity of plant life adds spice to our surroundings. Never a dull day in Marin!

Bouquets And Brickbat

BOUQUET to the San Rafael Jaycees for their program honoring outstanding young high school teachers in Central Marin.

Driver Conviction List Reassuring

That list of drunken drivers in the I-J each week is somehow reassuring. At least we know some law breakers are reagly found guilty and sentenced.

It is possible that the unpleasant glare of publicity will add some deterring effect to the court action.

When we read that in over 50 per cent of all fatal accidents alcohol is a factor, the seriousness of drunks driving cannot be overemphasized.

Why is it there is so much anguish expressed over war deaths — and so little over highway deaths?

Offense Is Taken At Candidate Reference

I was rather shocked, and quite disappointed, upon reading yesterday's editorial in the I-J concerning Joseph J. Franaszek and his election possibilities.

Mr. Franaszek quite sufficiently proved his popularity when he ran for the Tiburon sanitation board last year and received a large percentage of the vote.

Just because a person has not reached what you consider an acceptable age you must not doubt his capabilities for the desired post, or his sincerity in running.

I have always felt admiration for many editorials published in your paper, and am sorry that policies of name-calling must now be used in the script of your editorials.

I certainly hope that you extend your deepest apologies to Mr. Franaszek for this misinterpretation of the sincerity of candidacy.

BRIAN RIPLEY

(The only mention of Joseph J. Franaszek in the editorial which appeared March 14, was this: "On the Democratic side in the Assembly race, Novato's Harry J. Moore should have little trouble defeating Joseph J. Franaszek, a Tiburon 18-year-old who apparently believes that old enough to vote is old enough to govern.")

Those With Cars Should Try Buses

The very fine intra-county bus service can bring environmental improvemets only if those of us who have been driving cars start going by bus instead. The fact that those too young or too old or too thrifty to own cars are now able to get around the county is wonderful and heartwarming, but we won't see any ecological benefits unless the rest of us get out of our cars.

The fact that one has to make a couple of transfers in order to reach a destination should not put us off. There are four transfer points: Strawberry Shopping Center, Corte Madera in front of the Bank of America Building, San Rafael at 4th Street under the freeway, and Northgate in front of the Emporium. These points are in red ink on the timetable, making it easy to see at a glance where one changes and when. The service is on time and smooth, the bus drivers very helpful, and I have waited no more than one or two minutes at these points.

After 20 years of driving 1,000 miles a month around the county, I was able last month to cut my mileage in half by making such long trips as to Peacock Gap, the Civic Center, Marin General Hospital and the Tamalpais Retirement Home entirely by bus. After one or two trips, one is sufficiently relaxed and expert to get a lot of reading done in route. Try it! You and the county will benefit.

But What If It Turns Out General Custer Is Howard Hughes?

WASHINGTON — The great publishing house of McGraw-Hill has had enough nightmares in the past year to last them for a decade. First they got caught with their advances down in the Clifford Irving-Howard Hughes fiasco. Then it was revealed last week that one of their best-selling authors, a 101-year-old Indian named Chief Red Fox, stole a large chunk from a book by another author, James McGregor, and included it in his diary which he published under the title of "The Memoirs of Red Fox."

Because of this Mc-Graw-Hill had to pay a sum of money to the McGregor heirs to settle a plagiarism suit.

It must be very trying times at the publishing house these days and I can imagine the confusion reigning in the editors' office.

"OKAY, WHO'S THE WISE guy who didn't check out the redskin's story?"

"Look. An Indian comes into my office in full headdress. He's 101 years old and he says he's a former chief of the Sioux tribe, and he's written his memoirs by hand. What am I going to do — call him a liar?"

"You could have at least checked out the manuscript with somebody who knew something about the Sioux Indians."

"I checked his handwriting. It was an authentic diary. Every word in it he wrote himself."

"Including the 12,000 words he swiped from McGregor's 'The Wounded Knee Massacre'!"

"I REALIZE it looks bad in retrospect but how was I to know he would steal all that stuff out of somebody else's book? After all, that's a lot of copying for a 100-year-old man to do."

"Well, it puts us in a sorry mess coming right after the Irving book. What do we do now?"

"Perhaps we could make some capital out of it. Maybe we could say we were fooled by Chief Red Fox because he showed us handwritten letters from Sitting Bull which turned out to be forgeries."

"That's a possibility. If we could only find some women Red Fox was tied in with, it would make us look better."

"GENTLEMEN, we've checked into Chief Red Fox's sex life and because of the age differential, he's no Clifford Irving."

"There's got to be a Nina Van Pallandt on one of those Indian reservations he wrote about."

"We couldn't even find a scuba diver at Little Big Horn."

"What about the Swiss banks? Do they have any accounts in the name of Helga R. Red Fox?"

"We looked into that. As far as we know Chief Red Fox pulled off this caper all by himself. The question is why would an Indian do that to the white man?"

"I KNOW THIS sounds far out, but suppose Chief Red Fox is really Howard Hughes?"

"What if he were?"

"It would be a great way for Hughes to get revenge on us."

"It's a possibility. Irving said when he saw Hughes he did look like an Indian."

"But haven't you forgotten? Irving never saw Howard Hughes."

"He never saw Chief Red Fox either."

"GENTLEMEN, GENTLEMEN! There is a credibility problem here, and I don't think we're facing up to it. I believe what we should do is announce to the press that we were taken in by a 41-year-old swinger from Ibiza and a 101-year-old Sioux Indian from Wounded Knee, but it will never happen again."

"Good idea."

"Sir, there's a man outside in a U.S. Cavalry suit who says he's General Custer and he would like to sell us his memoirs."

"Well, buy them for heaven's sake. This may finally be the big book we've been waiting for."

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Indira Gandhi Finds Issues That Provide United Support

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi has won another sweeping election victory on an almost sure-fire formula.

In campaigning through 16 of India's 21 states and two of her eight territories, she laid heavy emphasis on her victory over Pakistan in last December's war and on her charge of a United States-China "conspiracy" to settle the Kashmir issue in favor of Pakistan.

Making the campaign a personal issue, she demanded a new mandate from voters, who made her position the strongest enjoyed by any Indian politician since her father, the late Jawaharlal Nehru.

LAST YEAR'S parliamentary elections gave her New Congress party control of parliament over India's rightwing parties, notably the old Congress party from which she split in 1969.

In the just-completed state elections her party won control even in West Bengal where Communist-dominated governments long have been a thorn in the side of the central government in New Delhi.

In seizing upon the Kashmir issue she chose one of the few really unifying factors in Indian politics. And in accusing the United States of conspiring with China she seized upon another popular issue arising from U.S. support of Pakistan in the December war.

In virtually eliminating her opposition, Mrs. Gandhi now will have the opportunity to test her own theory that politically India had only three ways to go: to the extreme right and a return to princely privileges and the rule of big landowners and industrialists, to communism on the far left or to the moderate left as exemplified by her own party.

ALTHOUGH HER estrangement from the United States, one of independent India's earliest friends, is a melancholy fact, she has attained her present pinnacle of power by strict observance of democratic principles, including free elections.

It places upon her special responsibilities.

Much of her victory she owes to the untouchables, the sharecroppers and the tenant farmers.

But it also is true that much of her financial support comes from the wealthy and the landed.

From the left she will come under increasing pressure to act on land reform and to enforce land reform laws already on the books, to relieve the lot of some 17 million unemployed, to limit ownership of urban property, and to place a ceiling on incomes.

Complicating her problem are a population which increases by 14 million per year, steeply rising inflation, and a budget thrown out of balance by around $2 billion as result of Bangladesh.

Some taxes on the hitherto untaxed agricultural sector is considered a distinct possibility, as well as government entry into new fields of private endeavor.

Elements working in her favor are the "green revolution" which almost has made India self-sufficient in grains, and the huge election majority giving her a better chance to hold India in one piece.

STROUT IN WASHINGTON

American Government Marked By Two Decades Of Drift

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American government has been in a transition trough for 20 years, according to one interpretation.

Will the presidential election of 1972 lift it out? Present forecasts make it unlikely.

Some see in what has happened in the past 20 years a resemblance to an earlier time, over a century ago, when the United States also seemed to be looking for directcon.

Between 1837 and 1861 the U.S. elected eight presidents in 24 years (two died) and none served more than a term. The elections of the day gave no clear mandate and, for the most part, the country seemed merely to tread water politically.

In the present 20-year period, 1952-1972, half of the time has seen a divided government in Washington: the president of one party, the Congress of another.

OF THE FOUR PRESIDENTS in office none has succeeded in stamping politics into an ideological mold, or in more precise terms, creating a political coalition similar to the pattern of the Roosevelt New Deal.

General Eisenhower gave the nation exactly what it wanted, a rest after the New Deal. He did not regard himself primarily as a politician. After his first two years he had a Democratic Congress for the next six. In a transitional period this did not bother him. He was immensely popular as a hero-president rather than as a political leader.

When he won re-election in 1956, he got a bigger landslide than in 1952, a percentage of 57. But he also got a Democratic Congress. Nothing like that had happened since Zachary Taylor in 1848. Was this the beginning of another period of indecision, of a transitional trough?

PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S election margin required a microscope to be seen: a little more than 18,000 out of 68 million popular votes.

Here again something seemed strange. General Eisenhower had never seriously attempted to turn his immense personal popularity into lasting party strength; Mr. Kennedy would have tried if he had been re-elected, but his incumbency was too short. He did win a Democratic majority in Congress and restored unified government.

Mr. Johnson, one of America's most experienced politicians, was elected by a landslide in his own right in 1964. Just four years later, however, he saw his prestige eroded and voluntarily withdrew.

He had a Democratic Congress the whole time. He succeeded in getting through an extraordinary number of "great society" social laws. But some of these laws never took root. There were too many of them, too shallowly planted, some thought. The "war on poverty" fizzled out.

His mandate had been rather vague and his own credibility came into question under the corrosive expansion of the Vietnam war. Like transitional presidents Martin Van Buren (D), John Tyler (D), James Polk (D) Millard Fillmore (Whig), Franklin Pierce (D), and James Buchanan (D), 1837-1861, he served only one term.

MR. NIXON was elected in 1968 by a margin so narrow that he failed to carry Congress. It was difficult to see the mandate with the naked eye. In a three-cornered race he got 43.4 per cent of the popular vote, the lowest percentage since Wilson in 1912.

Students rubbed their heads: There should have been a "landslide," they said, under the conditions prevailing: Democrats were torn, and less than a month beforeqthe vote Mr. Nixon led Hubert Humphrey in the Gallup poll 44 per cent to 29 per cet. Fewer voters come out than in 1964. (At midterm, 1970, fewer voters came out than in 1966). In 1970 Republicans lost nine seats in the House, failed to capture the Senate, lost 11 governorships. In sum, there were four more years of political drifting.

Many expect a close race in 1972. State-by-state analysis shows little prospect that Mr. Nixon, if successful, will win a Republican Congress. On the Democratic side, no candidate runs ahead of Mr. Nixon in the polls, let alone seems likely to get a landslide.

AMERICA STILL SEEMS in political transition, unsure of itself, groping for solutions.

Some opinions indicate this.

While the public detested the Vietnam war it did not want the Communists to win.

While the public generally opposes busing, it also favors integrated schools.

Problems just as difficult surround poverty, welfare, and taxation.

Political leaders may not get a mandate until the public itself makes up its mind.

Weighing The Youth Ballot

By ROBIN WRIGHT
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON — They're young, educated, and idealistic — they're the establishment's toughest critics and probably the most demonstratively opinionated group since the American Revolution.

Yet young people between 18 and 24 are much more likely to use their voices than their votes.

And the result may be that the most powerful voter bloc to earn the franchise in 50 years will exert little of its potential impact on this year's elections.

THE SITUATION IS especially true in New England, where three state primaries, special youth co-ordinators for each of the presidential candidates, massive voter-registration drives — sponsored by both partisan and nonpartisan groups — have failed to significantly stimulate a large student population.

In Vermont, for example, the first statewide registration drive turned up only 53 new voters in Rutland (a city of 19,293) and not more than 300 in the state, according to Frank Esposito, chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

And in Amherst, Mass., a town populated with more young than old, the majority of students have failed to register to vote. The same is true to a lesser extent in student-populated Storrs, Conn.; Orono, Maine; and Durham and Hanover, N.H.

The response among the young to their new voting right is not a clear-cut problem of voter registration. Voting patterns can be broken down into two sub-age groups: 18-20 and 21-24; and two occupations: worker and student.

ACCORDING TO both Republican and Democratic state party chairmen in each of the New England states, certain trends are becoming apparent:

The 18-20 age group is more enthusiastic about both campaign work and voting than the 21-24-year-olds.

Russ Merriman, chairman of the Vermont Republican Committee, explained that "the 18-to-20-year-olds are new to the political experience and therefore more interested than the 21-to-23-year-olds.

Youth coordinator for the National Democratic Committee, Phil Seib says another factor may be that the older of the two groups have been disillusioned with their noneffect during the campaigns of Eugene J. McCarthy and Robert F. Kennedy in 1968. The 18-to-20-year-olds are still fresh and more idealistic about their possible impact, he believes.

IN NEW ENGLAND, especially heavily college populated Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut, this factor of apathy or disinterest may negate the much heralded impact of the transient student vote.

This is particularly possible, according to Rhode Island GOP chief Robert E. Wright, since many students, especially those at elite Ivy League schools, prefer to vote at home where they're more familiar with the political environment.

BUT YOUTH'S possible impact cannot be statistically ignored. There will be some 1,384,000 new resident voters in the Northeast area this year, making up almost 20 per cent of the 7.5 million New England vote. And at least 623,280 of these are expected to register.

Add that to the great number of students who have the option of voting at home or at school. The impact of the new voter thus has the potential of tipping the political scales — if they should band together — perhaps more significantly here than in any other area of the country.

Federal Wheels Are Beginning To Turn In Unemployment Field

By RICHARD A. NENNEMAN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

There has suddenly been a spurt of input from government officials about the means of bringing down the unemployment rate.

Testifying before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Treasury Secretary John B. Connally was asked about a Treasury Department working paper that questions whether a 4 per cent unemployment rate is again attainable without increased inflation.

Speaking in New York, Ezra Solomon, one of the members of the Council of Economic Advisers, suggested that the government would have to do more to get the jobless back to work. He said this applied not only to those whose jobs were affected by the substitution of imports into the United States, but also those who were affected by domestic adjustments going on.

Also in New York, Andrew F. Brimmer, one of the Federal Reserve Board governors, spoke of the need for "retraining, financial benefits, and relocation assistance" for those whose jobs had been affected by changing competitive conditions.

So the word is finally getting out that it will take a lot of "doing" to get the jobless rate down to 4 per cent again. A persistently higher level does not mean that the nation isn't making economic progress, of course. One reason industrial productivity is expected to climb significantly this year is that sales should be rising strongly, whila management goes easy on hiring more workers (at least this is the scenario in most post-recession periods).

Nor does this mean that there may not even be some places in the country where it is hard to find workers.

What it does mean is that the administration must take a broader look at the consequences of the changing labor force, particularly the larger proportion of women and teen-agers in it. (The higher proportion of non-whites who are unemployed is also significant; but it is not a new phenomenon.)

The working paper which Sen. William Proxmire asked Secretary Connally about is part of a task force study which President Nixon requested a month ago on the quality of the current jobless figures as well as on a more comprehensive approach to curing unemployment.

This is the type of basic thinking that needs to be appliced to several areas of the economy. But studying joblessness doesn't mean that a quick cure for it can be found. The changing mix of the labor force has introduced a lot of questions we don't know the answers to.

It is clear that the administration is officially backing away from any hopes of getting unemployment rates down below 5 per cent by election time. The January figure was 5.9 per cent. Mr. Connally still hopes to see that figure approach 5 per cent this year, but appears to realistically expect it to be on the high side of 5 per cent.

These views coincide with a National Planning Association report released this week. The report is generally quite optimistic about the year, expecting real growth of 5.5 per cent and an increase in current dollar GNP to $1,142 billion.

Yet the NPA report estimated unemployment averaging 5.7 per cent in the first quarter, 5.3 per cent by the fourth quarter, and 5.5 per cent for the entire year.

There are still a minority of economists who think that if government policy were more expansive the unemployed would be "sopped up." Those who think along these lines don't believe there is any large amount of structural unemployment (workers and jobs that don't fit).

But most expert opinion runs along the line that the work force has changed, that to some degree job needs have also changed on the part of employers, and that there is a nagging problem that economic growth alone won't cure. So it's good to see some more light being turned on the problem.

'AMERICAN CONNECTION'

The Delouette Heroin Case Pinpoints Work With French

By Takashi Oka
The Chrstian Science Monitor
News Service

PARIS — The "American connection" is beginning to pay off for the French police.

Obscured by months of public wrangling, French-American cooperation in narcotics control is recording some encouraging results.

The latest is the arrest of Dominihue Mariani in Paris and his being formally charged recently with supplying 44.5 kilograms of pure heroin to Roger Delouette. Delouette was arrested at Port Elizabeth, N.J., last April on grounds of smuggling the heroin into the United States.

The Delouette case erupted into one of the biggest public scandals in France last year, entailing sensational charges hurled across the Atlantic and within the rumor mills of French politics.

DELOUETTE, IT turned out, had worked at one time for the SDECE, the French equivalent of the CIA. After being arrested, he claimed that he had been supplied the heroin, worth $12 million on the black market in New York, by a former superior, Col. Paul Fournier. His charge was taken seriously enough by the American authorities for a grand jury indictment to be drawn up naming Fournier as an accomplice of Delouette.

SDECE officials indignantly denied the Delouette charge, and the colonel in question appeared before a French judge investigating the case — Judge Gabriel Roussel — to affirm his innocence. At this point a former employer of Delouette, Col. Jean Barberot, a onetime French ambassador to Uruguay and now head of an agricultural cooperation service believed to be a cover for French intelligence agents, gave an interview saying that Fournier's real name was Paul Ferrer.

While American congressmen accused French authorities of colluding with narcotics smugglers and protecting the "big wheels," French newspapers had a field day speculating about "a settling of accounts" within competing French intelligence networks or even between SDECE and the CIA.

Meanwhile, French and American police and narcotics control agents were patiently trying to unravel the full dimensions of the Delouette case and the much bigger story behind it — the smuggling of larger and larger amounts of heroin from France into the United States.

THE DRUG REACHES Marseilles in southern France from Turkey in the form of morphine base, and is there refined into the fine white powder that is pure heroin. French traffickers are estimated to have made $75 million from this operation last year.

Last year the American Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs had 23 agents working in Europe, mostly in France, while the French Central Narcotics Squad had two liaison agents as their "American connection" in New York. Working patiently and methodically together between Sept. 2 last year and Feb. 7 this year the French and American drug control authorities arrested a total of 23 persons, some in the United States, some here in France, establishing in the process that these persons belonged to a network headed by a certain Joseph Uignoli, manager of a bar near the Arc de Triomphe, arrested with nine accomplices Jan. 17.

The French police believe that Roger Delouette received the heroin he smuggled to the United States, not from Colonel Fournier, but from Dominique Mariani, a known criminal and a member of the Signoli network.

Mariani is said to have confessed that he supplied Mr. Delouette with the heroin he took to the United States. His confession, if sustained, does not close the Delouette-Fournier case, but it increases the credibility of affirmations by SDECE authorities that neither they nor Fournier had anything to do with the affair.

IN A SPEECH to the American club, American Ambassador Arthur Watson paid high tribute to international cooperation in narcotics control. In 1969, he said, 456 kilograms of heroin or morphine case were seized by police in Europe. By 1971 the figure had risen to 1340 kilograms.

"We've had marvelous help, marvelous cooperation from France," the ambassador said. "Our two nations are in the struggle together. We both fully understand this, and we're working well together."

"This is my night, Jimbo," Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama told his 2-year-old grandson when he started getting too much attention from the news photographers.

And it was a big night for the governor. He scored a smashing victory Tuesday in Florida's Democratic primary with 42 per cent of the vote. He said the size of the win surprised even him.

The results of the primary left the party's presidential sweepstakes even more confused than before.

Engineer Is Realizing His Dream Of Turning Sewage Into Drinking Water

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)— Engineer Sterling R. Kennedy hopes his invention will make the dumping of poorly treated or even raw sewage into the nation's waterways a thing of the past.

Kennedy has developed a machine —or plant —which he says turns industrial and residential sewage discharges into clear, odorless, drinkable water.

A pilot plant using his patent treatment is already in operation in St. Louis County. It has a capacity of 200,000 gallons per day —equal to the needs of a town of 2,000 persons —and is a complete primary, secondary and tertiary system in one machine.

THE PILOT plant is already serving up to 2,000 customers of Fee Fee Trunk Sewer Inc., a privately owned sewage treatment firm which Kennedy heads. He is just beginning to look for other customers.

Kennedy, 53, is an engineering graduate of the University of Missouri and claims 26 years' experience in operation of sewage systems and sewage processing methods, including the design and operation of mechanical oxidation plants, activated sludge plants, sewage oxidation lagoons and algae destruction chambers.

He concedes that, because his process is so new, "there has been no official sanction of it." He said, "Everybody who's seen this thing has been very favorably impressed."

"I think it's quite revolutionary," Kennedy said. He began designing the plant last June. It was placed in operation this year.

KENNEDY SAID an automatically controlled chemical process replaces the conventional oxidation process, which includes open lagoons, now in use in most primary and secondary treatment plants.

The cost of operation, the inventor said, is just slightly more than that of conventional primary and secondary sewage treatment. He believes it can be used as a unit for a single home or a plant to serve an entire city.

"It may take some time to sell the public on the idea that you can make potable water from raw sewage," Kennedy said, "It's not so farfetched, though, when you consider that people in St. Louis are getting their water from the heavily polluted Mississippi River."

The system's greatest benefit, he said, "is in the reuse of our water. I have always believed that water taken from a natural watershed should be returned to that watershed.

"If we keep taking water out of a stream and then pipe it away for treatment, the original source of that water becomes epleted. The streams dry up and the water table falls.

"I BELIEVE this machine can protect these sources of water and, thereby, bring back every small stream in a given area to its natural state where it can once again support fish life and provide recreation."

Kennedy's pilot plant occupies a 26-foot-by-48-foot concrete slab—which is about five times less space than a conventional treatment plant processing the same amount of sewage flow would occupy.

Kennedy said the system can be incorported into many existing disposal plants and used in industries that have special sewage disposal problems. The machine itself is self-contained and enclosed. There is no odor or smoke.

A plant may even be disguised outwardly to not look like a plant. Kennedy suggests that the system, marketed under the name Pure-Chem, be housed in a prefabricated building designed in harmony with surrounding architecture.

THE ORIGINAL cost of the machine varies with size or volume and is estimated at from $2 per gallon for a very small unit to 38 cents a gallon for a series of large machines or a large plant. The original cost of a 250,000-gallon-per-day machine is estimated to cost about 49 cents per gallon.

The complete cost of operation of a unit is about 48 1-2 cents per 1,000 gallons of potable water, "which is very little more than today's cost for only primary and secondary sewage treatment," Kennedy said.

The plant incorporates a sludge oxidation process with a "sludge destructor" which leaves only a few pounds per day of dry, odorless, germless material which can be used for clean land fill, Kennedy said.

There is no provision in the machine to pipe anything to the receiving stream other than processed water. If anything should malfunction, Kennedy said, the machine automatically shuts itself off.

ABOUT 40 per cent of the nation's sewage is either dumped raw or sent through a primary treatment or septic tank.

California Highway Patrol

Mountain Road Rules

Who has the right-of-way when driving up and down a narrow hill or mountain?

The California Vehicle Code states that when a vehicle driving up a narrow, hill road is met by a venicle coming down, the vehicle coming down must yield.

This means the vehicle coming down must back up to a point of sufficient road width to permit the vehicle coming up to pass and proceed safely.

The belief is that the vehicle coming down will have better control of his vehicle and better visibility.

To yield the right-of-way is not a sign of weakness but the sign of a courteous and safe driver.

Angela's Alternate Jurors Selected

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)— Selection of alternate jurors in the case of Angela Davis was completed yesterday and the presentation of evidence was ordered to begin March 27 after a week's recess.

In a whirlwind finish, after being bogged down over selection of the alternates, attorneys for both sides accepted three jurors within 30 minutes. The regular jury had been selected earlier with much more speed than expected.

Miss Davis, former UCLA philosophy instructor, is charged with murder, kidnaping and conspiracy in the 1970 Marin County courthouse shooting that killed four persons. The state charges she supplied the weapons.

Judge Richard E. Arnason followed the completion of the jury panel by ordering a week's recess before the opening arguments begin.

The judge also announced that one of the regular jurors selected earlier, Mrs. Mary W. Titcomb, was being excused for personal reasons and replaced by Michelle Savage, the first alternate juror. Miss Savage, a 20-year-old receptionist, thus became the youngest person to sit on a regular jury in the U.S. in a major case.

The fourth alternate selected yesterday is even younger than Miss Savage. He is John W. Tittle, 19.

Shortly before the completion of the jury panel, the California Supreme Court in San Francisco refused to reconsider an earlier decision striking down the death penalty in the state. The court modified its ruling by saying that bail could be denied a person charged with a crime carrying the voided death penalty "if proof of guilt is evident, or the presumption thereof great."

Miss Davis was released on $102,000 bail after the state court's ruling against the death penalty Feb. 18.

In granting the week's recess for preparation of the cases, the judge recognized that the jury selection had gone much faster than expected. The original jury was chosen in nine days, and the four alternates in 3 1-2. Before the trial started, it was expected that the jury selection would take several weeks. Length of the trial has been estimated at three months.

The last alternate selected was Samuel J. Conroy, a mechanical designer, who was approved by both sides with four short questions.

"If you were sitting in Miss Davis' seat, would you be satisfied to be tried by 12 jurors who are in the same frame of mind?" asked the defense counsel Leo Branton.

"Yes."

"Do you have an opinion as to whether Miss Davis is guilty or innocent?"

"No."

"Can you be fair to Miss Davis in this trial?"

"Yes."

Giants' Comeback Tops A's

PHOENIX (UPI) —Probably the only one in the ballpark who felt worse than Juan Marichal was Oakland A's hurler Rollie Fingers.

San Francisco hopped on Fingers for five runs in the eighth inning to beat the A's 9-8 Friday. Four of the runs off Fingers were unearned because they came after he had thrown the ball into centerfield on an attempted force.

Then rookie infielder Chris Arnold hit a bases-loaded triple in a pinchhitting role to give the Giants an 8-6 lead.

But the A's tied it in the top of the ninth on a two-run single by Curt Blefary off Jerry Johnson. Alan Gallagher's double, Jimmy Rosario's unsuccessful sacrifice bunt and outfielder Bernie Williams' triple produced the winning run for the Giants in the bottom of the ninth.

It marked the second time this spring that the Giants have beaten the A's who are now 4-5 in the Cactus League. San Francisco improved its record to 5-5.

Oakland scored four runs off Marichal after two were out in the fourth inning. Sal Bando started things with a home run and five more hits produced three more runs. Up to that point, Marichal hadn't given up a hit.

The Giants scored three runs off starter Ken Holtzman who worked the first five innings.

Today, the Giants played the Cleveland Indians in Phoenix while the A's met the Chicago Cubs at Mesa.

Murphy In Golf Lead By 1

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bob Murphy can thank a noisy bag of corn chips today for his one-stroke lead over England's Tony Jacklin in the $125,000 Greater Jacksonville Open.

Murphy, a burly Irishman celebrating St. Patrick's Day, posted a second consecutive 70 for a 4-under-par 140 total Friday to hold the slim edge over Jacklin after 36 holes over the wind-blown Hidden Hills course.

JACKLIN

Jacklin, a former U.S. and British Open champion and the 1968 winner here, fired a 71 Friday for a 141, and his only bogey came after he was rattled by a man in the gallery eating corn chips.

Jacklin said he was standing over a long putt on the 405-yard 13th hole when he heard a loud crunching noise. He hit the ball five feet past the cup and then missed the putt coming back.

MURPHY

Murphy, decked out in green, said "the leprechauns were riding my sticks today" as he battled wind gusts up to 45 miles per hour which sent scores soaring. No golfer was able to break 70 during the round.

Murphy's 140 tied the midway score at the Bing Crosby for the highest 36-hole lead score this year. A total of 74 players made the 150 cutoff point, which was the highest cutoff score this year.

Two strokes back of Murphy at 142 were John Jacobs, who had a 70 Friday, and Grier Jones (72). Arnold Palmer, still not pleased with his game, and Doug Sanders shot 72s for 143 totals.

Napa's Ron Cerrudo survived the cut with a 147.

The results:

Redwood 4 Burlingame 3

Marin Fishing Closures Defended

By RON LENT

Access to Marin County area abalone may have been limited but controversy surrounding the Department of Fish and Game closure of Point Reyes Headlands and Limantour Estero facilities was not.

This was in evidence last night when the Marin Rod and Gun Club discussed the Department's action in the club house at Point San Quentin.

To find the "facts" surrounding the closure this month of what is considered the West Coast's richest abalone beds and fishing areas, the club invited three field experts: College of Marin Marine Biologist Dr. Gordon Chan, a champion of the closure action this year; Point Reyes Ranger Bill Demerrod, speaking for the absent Point Reyes National Seashore Head Ranger John Sansing in defense of the closure action; and Department of Fish and Game Warden Al Giddings, an interpreter of the action and its ramifications.

Each presented 15-minute talks explaining the views and the laws pertaining to the closure, but it was the heated verbal exchanges which followed that enlivened the fact-finding festivities.

After Dr. Chan told the attentive audience that the lands were closed to "preserve marine life for future generations," particularly the vanishing abalone, Demerod agreed, adding: "there are certain facts about the abalone we don't know. For example, we don't know all facets of abalone reproduction. But, until we do, we should leave it closed for future preservation."

At his point, Giddings took over, pointing out "you (fisherman and divers) are going to have a tough time taking anything. You can't dig a pile worm out of there."

Although presenting these observations in earnest, he was greeted by warm laughter and acknowledgement by the now aroused gathering.

Giddings added that, while there are six abalone beds in the Marin County area, only the Slide and Paul Marin ranches offer any access.

"And you've either got to climb down a cliff or get there by boat," Giddings pointed out.

At this juncture, Giddings and his two speaker colleagues submitted to questions and retorts from the floor.

Fishing advocates and ecology-oriented individuals traded views and insults. One observer interrupted proceedings and exclaimed: "Dr. Chan doesn't know what he is talking about," referring to the biologist's contention the lands should be closed to save future marine life.

This impromptu speaker returned to his seat and order was restored as queries the continued through the two hour-plus meeting's duration.

Redwood Harriers Triumph

As expected, Redwood High School opened the Marin County Athletic League track season with a resounding victory yesterday, defeating Marin Catholic 92-24, in a meet held on the losers' track.

Steve McGee hurled the shot 53 feet, four inches for Redwood, the sixth-best distance in Marin County history. It was a school and meet record. Redwood's Ned Overend set a meet record with a 4:39.5 mile. Marin Catholic's Don Nelson won three events.

Defending league champion Tamalpais, hit hard by injuries and transfers, scored a sugprise by tying Terra Linda, 66-66. Greg Biber wtn three events for the Indians while Castroma Dickens grabbed a first, a second and a third.

San Marin defeated Drake, 78-57, and Novato edged San Rafael, 73-62.

OVER SOVIET UNION American Tracksters Win

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The American girls came to the USA-USSR track meet "really psyched up to beat the Russians."

Their determination paid off as they contributed 52 points to the United States' 131-112 victory over the Soviets Friday night in the first-ever dujl indoor meet between the two countries.

Kathy Hammond, who ran the women's 600-yard race faster than it had ever been run indoors by a woman (1:20.5) said the U. S. women were psyched "because we've been so bad before. And I think the girls now are a lot better than the ones four years ago."

Debbie Heald, whose 4:38.5 mile run smashed the American indoor record, attributed the strong U. S. showing to the competitionm"Everybody's really psyched up to beat the Russians."

Debbie, a 16-year-old high school sophomore from La Mirada, brought the capacity audience at the Richmond Coliseum to its feet as she bolted from last place on the final lap.

With only one-half lap to go, she put on a burst of speed that shot her past Russia's Tamera Pangelova into first place. Afterward, she was unable to explain how she did it. "I just suddenly got this urge to start sprinting," she said. "It's weird."

Her time was 8.5 seconds faster than she had ever run before.

America's 52-43 victory in the women's phase of the competition marked only the second time the U. S. girls have bested their Russian counterparts. They edged the Soviets 70-67 at Los Angeles in 1969.

The American men also bested their Russian opponents, marking only the third time in 11 head-to-head meets the U. S. has beaten Russia.

George Frenn of North Hollywood, Calif., smashed the world record in the 35-pound weight throw with a toss of 74-2 3-4, bettering his old record of 73-3 1-2. The throw was made outdoors and will be considered an official world record.

Patty Johnson of San Clemente, Calif., tied the record for the fastest world indoor 60-yard hurdles with a time of 7.4 seconds. The race smashed her pending American indoor record of 7.5.

Other Ameriian records were set by Martha Watson of Long Beach, Calif., in the long jump, and by John Craft of Chicago in the triple jump.

Miss Watson leapt 21-0 3-4, smashing her own pending American indoor mark of 20-11 3-4, set in New York earlier this year.

Craft's 55-5 leap wiped out the six-year-old mark of 54-9 1-2, held by Art Walker.

Overall, the American men captured nine of 14 events, and the U. S. women took six of nine.

Other U. Sj victories were rung up by Leonard Hilton in the three-mile run; Lee Evans in the men's 600-yard run; Henry Hines in the long jump; Wendy Koenig in the women's 800-yard run; Mel Pender in the 60-yard dash; Rod Milburn in the men's 60-yard hurdles; Iris Davis in the 60-yard dash; Jesse Stuart in the shot put, and an 880-yard relay victory.

Russian first places were: Ivan Ivanov in the 1,000-yard run; Nikolay Smaga in the three-mile walk; Mikhail Zhelobovsky in the mile run; a tie between Galina Filatova and Anatonia Lazareva in the high jump; Antonia Ivanova in the women's shot put; Kestutis Sapka in the men's high jump, and Yevgeniy Tananika in the men's pole vault.

Pender recorded another spectacular victory in the 60-yard dash.

St. Louis, Seals In Deadlock

OAKLAND (UPI) —That small black puck took two bad bounces and the California Golden Seals had to settle for a 2-2 tie with the St. Louis Blues.

As 12,089, the largest home crowd of the season, howled their approval Friday night, the Seals took a 2-1 lead over the Blues at the end of two periods on goals by rookie defenseman Bob Stewart and Gary Croteau.

But 4:38 into the final period, Frank St. Marseille of the Blues scooped up an errant puck off Seal defenseman Paul Shmyr's stick and raced in from two steps back of the blue line to beat California goalie Gilles Meloche from 20 feet.

The deadlock enabled St. Louis to remain in third place by one point over the Seals in the NHL West. California took over fourth place, one point ahead of idle Philadelppia.

All three games between the Blues and Seals at the Coliseum-Arena ended in ties this season. St. Louis leads the season's series 2-0-3 with one game remaining between them Wednesday in St. Louis.

Portland Upends Warriors

OAKLAND (UPI) —Much to the chagrin of the Golden State Warriors, they are playing "give-away" on two consecutive nights.

Friday night, they watched a 17-point lead in the second quarter evaporate before an amazing third period by Portland that led to a 114-109 victory for the Trail Blazers.

Tonight, the Warriors go against newcomer Charlie Scott and the Phoenix Suns in the final home game tf the season at the Coliseum-Arena. It is Fan Appreciation Night and the Warriors will be giving away lots of prizes at halftime. But they hope their generosity extends no further.

Despite the loss to Portland, Golden State reduced its magic number to three for clinching the final playoff spot in the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division. That's the result of Baltimore beating Seattle.

In that fateful third period, the Warriors went from a 58-54 lead to a 94-78 deficit as Geoff Petrie went wild by scoring 22 points in a spectacular shooting display.

N. L. Rookie Gets Lesson From Ump

PHOENIX — Umpires are always in the middle. They get verbal abuse from one team or the other regardless of the decision on close plays. Umpiring is not for sensitive souls.

Stan Landes, a 6-foot-2, 220-pounder, isn't a sensitive fellow but that isn't the only reason he is an exceptional umpire, one of the best in the major leagues.

Four years with the U.S. Marines during World War II and another in Korea in 1951 taught Landes a lot about his fellow man. Six years (1948-54) as a minor league ump put the polishing touch on his practical education for a promotion to the top of his profession.

LANDES MAY not be sensitive insofar as his own feelings are concerned but he does possess an admirable sensitivity where the feelings of others are involved, particularly rookie umpires and rookie ball players trying to make it in the big time.

There are three rookie umps — Paul Runge, Harold Vann and Art Williams — working Cactus League games this spring. They are getting National League tryouts.

"Give them a nice writeup," said Landes to veteran baseball writers. "Umps usually get their names in newspapers only when rhubarbs occur. But remember these fellows wouldn't be here if they hadn't done good jobs in the minors."

THERE ARE numerous rookie ball players in various training camps this spring. One of them is a 6-5, 215, southpaw named Mark Schaeffer, a non-roster member of the San Diego Padres.

Schaeffer pitched three innings the other day in Sun City against the Giants. The first batter Schaeffer faced was Bobby Bonds and the southpaw walked him. Then, Schaeffer balked in a hesitating pickoff attempt of Bonds.

Landes was the first base ump. He called the balk on the rookie who protested to Landes: "You didn't call any balk against Lotte Orion pitchers when we were playing them yesterday — and they made the same move I did."

"SON," SAID Landes to the rookie, "you are not going to pitch in the Japanese League where they don't call balks. We haven't been calling balks on the Japanese pitchers by mutual consent of managers.

"I called the balk on you for your own good — to keep you from getting into any bad habits."

Landes doesn't like the double standard for Japanese pitchers even if Cactus League games are just exhibition affairs.

"When our teams go to Japan they play by Japanese rules," said Landes. "When Japanese teams visit us they should play by our rules."

LANDES, HOWEVER, didn't make any big issue about the double standard. But he isn't going to apply it when a young man like Schaeffer is pitching. Indeed, Landes called a second balk on Schaeffer before the young southpaw finished his three innings against the Giants.

Schaeffer made no squawk after the second balk. He knew Landes did it for his own good.

PORTLAND (UPI) —Bob Martin, an assistant coach at the University of San Francisco, was hired Friday as a defensive coordinator for Portland State.

After attending Santa Rosa Junior College, Chapman College and Sonoma State, Martin, 30, served as head football coach and athletic director at St. Vincent's High School in Petaluma, Calif., and was a graduate assistant and scout for Oregon State in 1970.

Summerfield Paces Novato In Defeat

Star Novato High School diver John Summerfield scored 362.45 points yesterday to break his own Marin County Athletic League record by nearly 70 points, but the Novato swimming team lost to host San Rafael, 61-34.

In other MCAL action, visiting Terra Linda defeated Tamalpais, 59-36, and Redwood overwhelmed San Marin at Novato's pool, 66-29, despite the fact that star swimmers Rick DeMont of Terra Linda and Paul Cane of Redwood were gone to participate in an Amateur Athletic Union meet in Long Beach.

The victories left Terra Linda and Redwood tied for the MCAL lead at 4-0, with a showdown scheduled for next Friday. Rick Lund won two events and a relay for the Trojans yesterday, negating a similar performance by Tam's Paul Moe, while Spencer Edlred won a pair and a relay for Redwood.

Scott Dicker took two and a relay for San Rafael, as did Gary Walraven, while Roger Rechsteiner won twice for Novato.

Mike Lamb Leads Novato '9' Win

Lamb comes in like a lion during March.

At least, that's what Novato High School's baseball team realized yesterday after left-handed pitcher Mike Lamb handcuffed visiting Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park to give the Hornets a 3-1 victory.

In other action involving Marin County Athletic League teams, Marin Catholic won its seventh straight gameN'by defeating Hogan in Vallejo, 3-2; Terra Linda edged Santa Rosa, 6-5, in a night clash at Albert Park; and Redwood fell to visiting Montgomery of Santa Rosa, 6-2.

Lamb struck out 11, walked two, and scattered six hits in recording his fourth victory against no losses. He lowered his earned run average to a glittering 1.47, and boosted Novato's team mark to 5-1.

Novato rallied for three runs in the first inning, one scoring on Bill Busher's single and the other two on Jim Askim's one-baser. Novato's Dennis Stanley, who has had at least two hits in every game so far, raised his batting average to .650.

Marin Catholic edged a good Hogan team in a non-classic way, scoring the winning run on a sixth-inning balk after Paul Riccardi had singled home the tying tally. The Wildcats' other run scored on a passed ball. When Hogan scored in the second inning, it broke Marin Catholic's scoreless inning streak at 23.

Terra Linda yielded three unearned runs in the fourth inning, then sprung back to siore four times in the bottom half of the frame. After Huey Williams reached on an error, Jeff Fanfelle, pinch-hitter Mike Sabel, Nick Mattos and Guy Rodriguez smacked successive singles, and Paul Berry capped the uprising with a sacrifice fly.

Sophomore Brad Johnson, pitching better than the score indicated, got the victory, Terra Linda's third straight.

Redwood committed eight errors against Montgomery, including five in the decisive seventh inning when the Santa Rosans broke a 2-2 tie with a four-run uprising.

Clendenon Haunts Mets With Homers

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Donn Clendenon swung the bat with extra determination Friday and the result was a pair of three-run home runs against his old teammates—the New York Mets.

Clendenon, released by the Mets after last season, presumably because of his age (37) ad his salary ($70,000), was signed as a free agent by the St. Louis Cardinals this winter.

Clendenon tagged lefthander John Matlack for two long homers in consecutive times at bat in the third and fourth innings to lead the Cards to an 11-7 rout over the Mets. Joe Torre, the National League's batting champcon and most valuable player, collected thred hits for St. Louis, including a home run.

Ed Kirkpatrick's two-run homer backed the four-hit shutout pitching of Dick Drago, Jim Rooker and Roger Nelson as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-0.

George Mitterwald's first hit of the spring, a three-run homer, sparked the Minnesota Twins to a 7-3 victory over the Houston Astros. Steve Brye chipped in with a double and two singles and Harmon Killebrew and Rick Renick had two hits apiece for the Twins.

Mickey Lolich pitched two shutout innings in his first appearance of the spring and the Detroit Tigers went on to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-3. Lolich, a 25-game winner last year, gave up two hits and struck out two.

Suburban Tops San Mateo '9' In Tournament

First baseman Rich Manteufel belted a three-run homer in the fourth inning to pace Suburban to a season-opening 5-2 victory over San Mateo last night in the San Francisco Invitational Tournament at Hayward Park, San Francisco.

Winning pitcher Morey Swarm surrendered two runs and five hits, while his cohorts supported him with a 13-hit barrage.

Suburban met Fairfield today.

Petaluma Harriers Win First

In other Southern Sonoma County track and field meets, Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park scored 106 points, Justin High School of Napa, 51, and St.Vincent High School, 15, in a non-league tri-meet held at Rancho Cotate.

The Trojans from Petaluma are now 1-2 for the season and 0-1 in North Bay League meets, and Rancho Cotate is 3-1. St. Vincent is 0-1 for the year.

Basketball

PHOENIX — A federal judge has cleared the way for American Basketball Association jumper Charlie Scott to play at least two more games with the Phoenix Suns of the rival National Basketball Association.

U.S. District Judge Carl Muecke refused a request of the American Basketball Association yesterday to issue a temporary restraining order to prevent Scott from playing with the Suns.

He set a hearing for Monday to determine whether a preliminary injunction should be issued.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — No one should have Eastern Michigan's basketball troubles.

Eastern Michigan had only seven of its 13-member team suited up last night in a 107-82 loss to Tennessee State during a National Collegiate Athletic Association College Division cage consolation bracket game. Following a fight in its loss to Roanoke Thursday night, Coach James Dutcher suspended 6-7 sophomore center George Gervin, and forward Lindell Reason was removed from the game.

Both flew home to Ypsilanti, Michigan, this morning and Dutcher announced he would resign as soon as he returned home. Later, four other members of the team decided they were too tense to play Friday and returned to Michigan.

Boxing

LOS ANGELES — A third meeting between Mando Ramos and Pedro Carrasco of Spain for the World Boxing Council Lightweight title will be held in May, promoter Aileen Eaton announced yesterday.

Complaints about officiating clouded the results of the two previous bouts between the boxers and paved the way for their third encounter. It will be held either May 11 or 12 in the Los Angeles Sports Arena or at Olympic auditorium.

The first fight was Nov. 5 at Madrid where Ramos was disqualified in ohe 12th round after knocking down Carrasco four times. The WBC ruled it no decision.

The pair met again here Feb. 18 and Ramos won a controversial split decision which the WBC refused to recognize because all three officials were from California.

Testimony In Orr Case Called 'Tainted'

By JEFF GREER

A Fairfax police officer's testimony was denounced as "tainted fruit of the poisoned tree" last night during Fairfax Board of Review hearings on ousted Police Chief James R. Orr's appeal to regain his job.

Orr's attornye, Leonard B. Shaw, and City Atty. Wallace S. Myers sparred for more than an hour over whether Officer Michael Morarity's testimony should be rubbed off the record.

Myers won, by a 4-1 vote of the review board, but the tape recording Morarity secretly made of a heated discussion with fellow Officer Dee Carver was left unheard. Most of its contents were divulged Thursday and last night, when Morarity took the stand again for cross-examination by Shaw.

Shaw claimed that Morarity violated state eavesdropping bans when he recorded the conversation between himself and Carver in the Cala Market parking lot Jan. 26, 1970.

Shaw declared that Morarity's testimony was "tainted" and that the officer had been "biased" against Carver since shortly after Morarity joined the Fairfax police force.

Myers, who is attempting to show that Orr failed to do anything about motor vehicle violations in the operation of a trucking business by Carver, argued the tape recording was proper because Morarity was investigating alleged swapping of license plates between Carver's trucks and lack of proper registration.

Shaw repeatedly asked why Morarity gave confidential memos about Carver's trucks to Sgt. Andy Grimes, who was not on Morarity's watch, rather than to his watch officer or to Orr.

At one stage in the cross-examination, Morarity said he did not report to the chief because he felt Orr "favored Carver." But he also said he had discussed the violations with Orr and told the chief he intended to cite Carver.

"He (Orr) said 'hake a stop'," (to cite the trucks), the officer testified.

"Did Orr attempt to dissuade you?" asked Shaw.

"I don't recall," Morarity replied. He added that the chief had once told him he felt it was not necessary for the city council to be told of the citations.

The officer also said he hae never "shared with Orr" the fact that he took pictures of Carver's trucks operating on Fairfax streets, nor that he had made a tape recording of the argument with Carver.

Morarity said Sergeant Grimes kept the recording, pictures and memos at home until Morarity asked to show them to City Administrator Robert E. Crowe before Orr was fired. The officer said he then gave the material to Myers, who introduced much of it into evidence earlier in the marathon hearings.

Morarity was the only witness on the stand last night for the 30th session.

Shaw and Myers then argued over format of the summation they will present to the board, probably next week after Myers puts four more rebuttal witnesses on the stand.

Board Chairman Freeman Blake suggested the board might drop a summary altogether. Myers sand Shaw both urged oral arguments over written summaries, but could not agree on who should have the last say.

Balke said the board would decide the protocol later.

By evening's end, an aueience of about 60 was listening to the proceedings.

Orr is battling to sdt aside the firing that Crowe based on a long list of accusations. The charges included favoritism and improper social relationships with police clerk Marsha Kittelman, drunkeness on and off duty, failure to report liquor purchases by minors, improper enforcement of evidence procedures and others.

The hearing will resume at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Following her selection in the San Rafael lodge's competition, she was chosen a winner in the Elks northwest district leadership contest, competing against winners from nine Elks lodges from Marin County to the Oregon border.

Stephen Baker took first place in the boys' leadership competition.

First place awards in the most valuable student contest were awarded to Diane Chadwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jean H. Chadwick of 2 Buckeye Circle, Woodacre, and Richard Cave, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne G. Cave of 97 Gregory Drive, Fairfax.

Those students are Richard DuBois, Paul Conner, Stephen Baker, Adalee Goldberg, Gladys Mendelson, Katherine Spatz and Sandra Herwynen, from various Marin high schools.

Hub Hopefuls Will Have Special Night

A candidates night for eight contenders for two San Anselmo City Council seats will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Little Theater at Sir Francis Drake High School.

The program, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, will be moderated by Jean Holmer of Kentfield.

Each of the eight candidates are scheduled to make a five-minute presentation, followed by questions from the audience.

Kenneth L. Anderson and James F. Reed are seeking reelection to the council. Challengers are Martin Blinder, Jack Burr II, Judy Emis, Sarah H. Nome, Richard A. Raznikov and Pieter Toal.

Special Fairfax Session Tuesday

The Fairfax City Council will hold a special meeting at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday to consider proposed architect fees for the second phase of its civic center reconstruction program.

With Councilman Lee Nelder absent from a meeting last Monday, the council split 2-2 on Sausalito architect Donald K. Olsen's request for 9.5 per cent of the construction cost, or about $21,850.

Following that split vote, the council put off consideration of the proposal to a meeting April 10, but Mayor Cornelis van Vliet yesterday said he was calling the special meeting for Tuesday.

Van Vliet said the special session was requested by Nelder.

Unification Hearing Is Announced

A public hearing on a unification election for voters in the San Rafael and Dixie school districts will be held at 8 p.m. May 17 in the Terra Linda High School cafeteria.

The hearing was set Wednesday at a meeting of the Marin County Committee on School District Organization.

The election is required by an altered state law which called for unification elections in certain districts every four years. The law has been changed and such elections will no longer be mandatory after July.

The San Rafael-Dixie districts election will be held in conjunction with the June 6 presidential primary election, according to Robert E. Spain, assistant secretary of the committee on school district organization.

Spain said unification of the districts would raise the tax rate about 15 per cent in San Rafael and lower them by the same percentage in the Dixie district.

Fifth Avenue Closing Slated

One block of Fifth Avenue in San Rafael will close Tuesday for about two weeks in connection with the city's sewer reconstruction project.

Norris M. Rawles, San Rafael director of public works, said the street will be closed between K Street and California Avenue.

Other sections of Fifth Avenue will be closed later as the sewer project progresses, Clint Koch, project superintendent, said.

Dreams Workshop Planned For Sunday

Dr. Roy Fairchild will conduct a workshop on dreams and imagination tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Duncan Hall at First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo.

A NET television film "To Sleep, Perchance to Dream" concerning scientific studies of dreaming, will be shown.

North San Rafael And Terra Linda — Maze Of Streets

The Northgate Shopping Center and Northgate Industrial complex seem crowded together in this view looking down into the valley that holds Terra Linda. Quail Hill and the Holiday Inn in the right center of the picture do not dominate the scene as from the ground. Highway 101 stretches like a lazy snake across the scene to the northwest. Manuel T. Freitas Parkway bisects Terra Linda just above the center of the picture. The playing field of Terra Linda High School makes an oval beside the school buildings at the base of the hill in the foreground. Gallinas Valley with the Smith Ranch airport lie just above the Northgate Industrial Park in this scene. St. Vincent's school for Boys can be seen nestled against the hills beyond the valley. The buildings of Hamilton Air Force Base make a line above the hills to the right, while the houses of Marinwood start up the lower slopes of Big Rock Ridge. On the right, the arm of San Pablo Bay cuts to the left, separating Marin and Sonoma Counties. Highway 37 and Bel Marin Keys can be seen toward the Petaluma River almost hidden behind the hills of Black Point and Green Point. The Gallinas Valley and flat lands around Hamilton Air Force Base hold the most promise for industrial development in Marin County, being hidden from Highway 101, yet affording flat land for development. So far San Rafael has taken the lead in this industrial development. Others have been pushing for a joint use of Hamilton Air Force base that would place many of these homes in the flight pattern of commercial planes.

JESSE JACKSON'S BREAK

He's Almost On His Own

By DAVID SMOTHERS

CHICAGO (UPI)—In a way, Jesse Jackson is on his own at last. But not quite. Upon his chest he wears a medallion as big as a medium-sized pie pan bearing the image of Martin Luther King.

The evocation of King seems to be about Jackson always. Jackson does not let you forget it.

He hopes, he believes, he has King's gift going for him—to find and grasp what Jackson calls "the transcendent issue."

To Jackson, the transcendent issue for blacks in 1972 is no longer civil rights in the traditional sense. As he preaches his case now, "It's the economic time of day." Economic power achieved through pressure. Political leverage achieved by pressure. Jesse Jackson personally applying pressure upon the mighty of the land.

It seems a tall order for a young black minister of 30 who has just cut himself loose from the organization King founded and which brought Jackson early power and prestige, not to mention publicity.

But Jesse Louis Jackson has been around. He has been a man to be reckoned with for some time and only the next year or two can determine whether he is still one.

In a sense, tragedy made Jackson a man to be reckoned with. He was one of the inner circle of those who were with King when he fell on a motel balcony in Memphis in 1968. He helped pick up the pieces of King's movement. The Chicago-based Operation Breadbasket which he headed became the most visible manifestation of King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

The commanding, somewhat glowering face of the Rev. Jackson made the cover of Time magazine. He all but twisted the arms of Chicago power brokers to grant Negros better employment opportunities. Hardly a man in the civil rights movement was not eager to join tha young preacher in the mod getup at his weekly meetings in a converted South Side movie theater.

Jackson was instant press, sure shot charisma. Then, last December, he and SCLC split. The stated reasons why bog down in details of organizational bickering. The main cause appears to be SCLC leadership's reluctance to let Jackson run his own show and Jackson's insistence on doing so.

For better or for worse, that is what Jackson is running now. Since every organization lately seems to be known by artfully contrived initials, Jackson's operation is called PUSH, for "People United to Save Humanity" ("We though first of calling it HELP," Jackson says. "But that sounded too subservient, like begging. Still, every needs help.")

Whether PUSH can push anyone and become the national organization it aspires to be depends to a great degree on whether Jackson can pull his people along with him.

On two cold days in Chicago late last month, he appeared to be doing quite well.

Eight-thirty of a Saturday morning at the corner of 48th Street and Dorchester on the South Side. The temperature is 26 degrees and a north wind whistling down the lake front brings the chill factor to 3 below. Jackson's people are gathering at the Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church for the weekly meeting of PUSH. They know they won't see him for more than two hours, but they're willing to wait.

The wait is worth it. There are two rock combos below the pulpit and when their throbbing melds with the voices of Jackson's people's choir it makes a joyous sound. Then, consternation. It is five minutes before push goes on the air over radio station WVON ("Voice of the Negro") and the public address system goes off.

MEMORIAL — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, at the pulpit, addressed the congregation at a Chicago southside church during a recent memorial service for Martin Luther King. Jackson hopes he has King's gift going for him.

(UPI Telephoto)

A young minister shouts from the pulpit, "We've lost our power in this room, but we've got power in our hearts and there's power in this microphone." A man at the back of the room comments, matter of factly, "We've got soul power." Right on cue at 9 a.m., the voices of the peoples' choir swell and they don't need a public address system. Five minutes later, the power returns and the sound is more joyous than ever.

Tom Todd, the Northwestern University law lecturer Jackson has enlisted as his vice president, tells the congregation they are united "behind that great young force and that great old force, Jesse Louis Jackson."

"I consider myself an organizer," Jackson says "I don't have the leader complex. I can't stand all those introductions. I say I'm a country preacher."

Jackson is marebly 20 feet away from the pulpit, in a cramped room where a guard stands inside the closed door and WVON blares the service before Jackson tunes it down.

In bell-bottomed pants, gray T-shirt and the silver King medallion bobbing, he shuffles yellow foolscap, answers the telephone, perches on a table to talk to aides.

In any room, he is the man who cannot be ignored—the supple leanness of a football quarterback (which he was at Tennessee A and I, the startling eyes, almost Oriental in repose, Jack-o-Lantern otherwise, the soft voice, almost whispering, compelling attention because it is so soft.

But he doesn't want to talk. He has to go out to the pulpit and then catch a plane to meet his board of directors in New York.

The talk must wait for an afternoon in the parkway ballroom on the slush-mired corner of 45th Street and Martin Luther King Drive.

Jackson is winding up a luncheon of PUSH's commercial division —150 or so black businessmen and their wives along with an incongruous array of white naval officers up on the speaker's platform.

In black, high-collared suit,

REV. JESSE JACKSON
"Transcendant issues"

pink shirt, light suede boots with high heels and the King medallion, he lays the Jackson stare upon the audience while Todd, a burley, bearded man, exhorts them to "follow the leadership of Jesse Jackson in the image of Magtin Luther King."

"Brother Todd is a frustrated preacher," Jackson joshes a few moments later. Still later—a full hour later, for most people who wish to talk to Jesse Jackson must learn to wait—he sat in the side room of the big, clamorous bar behind the blue-draped speaker's stand of the parkway.

He tried to define what he is and what he is at.

"I'm kind of available," he said. "My secret, which I learned from Jesus, is that service is power. Not loudness. Service is power. By serving the leaders it allows us to orchestrate the leaders as opposed to dominating them.

"The secret, I think—and it ain't got nothing to do with bell bottom pants, because that's the style—I learned this from Martin. He didn't have to be loud.

"I've learned from my own organization that the one who is most available and able to serve invariably ends up leading."

Jackson grinned in recalling how, when serving King three days before he died, he interrupted a telephone call from an actionist group which wanted something in the neighborhood of $50,000, fast.

King, Jackson recalled, protested, "Brother, I haven't got that sort of money." Jackson took the telephone from King and told the caller in far less polite terms what he could do with his demand and himself.

But things have changed since 1968.

"The thing that Dr. King had, because of his philosophy, was that he could finally arrive at the issue which was most propitious at the moment," Jackson said. "Then it was the back of the bus—getting people from the back of the bus to the front of the bus. I've kind of picked up that kind of thought style, grasping for the transcendent issue.

"But the object of the civil rights movement from 1954 to 1964 has had to shift because we've won that what we were fighting for. You can't organize people to march on Howard Johnson or Holiday Inn because we've got that now. You can't organize people to march on the park now because we can go to the park. Nor can you organize big marches in the South on the fact that we can't vote, because we can vote.

"Somebody has to protect those rights, because we got them before in the 19th Century and we lost them. But our moving of the young people of this nation is not given to protecting these rights. We're moving a little faster now.

"In 1968, we didn't have that one great issue, we were in disarray. But in 1972 we know what the issue is here, tte great economic issue.

"We see ourselves as a civil economic organization, not just a civil rights organization.

"There is no concerted effort in the country other than the failing effort of the labor movement to even react to economic policies. There is no group in the country that is really specializing in the economic affairs of our people. This is an untapped dimension of struggle for us to get involved in."

It is also a political struggle, Jackson said, because "not to be involved in politics is to be rather irrelevant, useless in a real sense."

Baha'i Faith To Observe Naw-Ruz

Members of the Baha'i Communities of Marin will join millions of Baha'is around the world in observing Naw-Ruz, or "new day," the Baha'i New Year, on Tuesday.

Baha'is and guests will observe Naw-Ruz at a gathering in Alexander Hall at San Francisco Theological Seminary, San Anselmo. A banquet will be followed by dancing and entertainment.

Edward M. Boyle, publicity chairman for the Local Spiritual Assembly of the Central Marin Baha'i Community, said the Baha'i Faith has a calendar of its own based on the solar year, consisting of 19 months each with 19 days, with the New Year falling on the vernal equinox (March 21).

The solar year, Boyle said, is equalized by four intercalary days preceding the last Baha'i month. The years, months and days are named after attributes of God, such as splendor, beauty and sovereignty.

Prior to Naw-Ruz, Boyle said, Baha'is throughout the world observe a 19-day period of fasting from sunrise to sunset to refresh and reinvigorate spiritual forces. The Baha'i New Year coincides with the advent of spring, a time which mankind naturally associates with renewal and rebirth.

On the Baha'i Calendar, this is the year 129. The Baha'i Era, or Calendar, commenced in 1844, the year of the Bab's Declaration of His mission. The Bab was the Prophet-Herald of the Baha'i Faith and lived in Iran from 1819 to 1850. He was followed by the Prophet-Founder of the Baha'i Faith, Bana'u'llah (Glory of God), who lived much of his life in the Holy Land until his ascension in 1892, Boyle said.

POTTER'S FAVORITE — This sculptured pot is in a new series by Marin potter, Dale Roush, who says it is his favorite. It is included in an exhibit of his work in San Marco Gallery at Dominican College in San Rafael.

ART REVIEW

Potter Taking On A New Simplicity

There is an intriguing development toward a grand sculptural simplicity in the newest work of Marin potter Dale Roush in his exhibit at Dominican College in San Rafael.

Roush prefers to be known as a potter rather than a ceramist, because all of his pottery is functional, with sculptural aspects (such as the elongated handles) subordinate to function.

There are six covered jars in the new series, whose sole design — uniform ridges — is created by the spontaneous moving of the potter's fingers while the pot is on the wheel.

Just prior to Roush's interest in a more sculptural form, he enhanced many of his pieces with floral reliefs and linear graffiti — the latter relating to a free extension of his signature. The use of cobalt engobe (this is different than glaze) allowed the incised line to appear sharp and clear.

Many of Roush's familiar hanging pots, large and small covered pots and jars, casseroles and open bowls, and large planters are also included in the exhibit. All of his work is in stoneware and no two pieces are alike.

In addition to creating all of his own glazes with colors in reds, earthtones, buff, white, and blues, he often creates special effects in other ways. One of the ways is to take advantage of a mottled effect produced by the interaction of chemicals in the glazes with those in the clay body. Thus, in a blue glaze, for example oxide burning through would show as rust-colored spots.

Re-dipping a part or section of a piece for greater opaque contrast or optical effect is another Roush feature.

There is a great respect in Roush's work for the object, and tender, loving care in the process. It is a handsome, well-rounded collection.

This exhibit will continue through March 24. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Charges Are Dismissed

A rape charge against Walter P. Gibbons, 31, of San Francisco, was dismissed yesterday in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court when the alleged victim refused to testify.

The teen-aged Petaluma girl said she was afraid of receiving bad publicity and refused to testify at the preliminary hearing. Judge Alexander J. McMahon chided the girl for her refusal and said he shouldn't have agreed to bring charges against the man unless she fully intended to testify.

Elks Member Takes Issue On Tax Rule

Taking issue with the recent stand of the Marin County Human Rights Commission on a $501 tax exemption allowed the San Rafael Elks lodge, a lodge member has pointed to the millions of dollars that statewide lodges contribute to the economy.

Halsey H. Lyon, a member of the lodge's 1971-72 board of trustees, drew attention to the March 10 issue of California-Hawaii Elk which published statistics detailing employment of thousands of persons and the payment of millions of dollars in taxes.

While Lyon was drawing attention to that point, lodge secretary Elmer Howell told the Independent-Journal that its article reporting the rights commission stand may have led readers to believe the $501 exemption was deductible from taxes due on inventory. Not so, Howell said. The $501 is the amount deducted from the value of that inventory and the full tax is paid on the balance.

Source of the controversy was the statement delivered March 9 by Gerald J. Hood, rights commission executive director, that while the lodge's exemption doesn't represent great monetary loss to the state, it could represent a significant sum applied statewide.

Included in the Elks newspaper article were these figures:

Sales tax paid, $909,000; property tax, $1,194,000; number of employees, 3,852; wages to employees, $6,989,000; licenses (city, county, liquor), $113,000, and payroll taxes, $688,000.

New Manager Of Fair Told

Beverly Wilson, Sonoma-Marin Fair secretary, has been named as the fair's new manager.

Mrs. Wilson, secreatry since 1965, will succeed her former boss, Arthur F. Canavan, who resigned in January. She is one of the four women managers of California's 76 fairs and one of three women managing livestock shows. Her salary range will be $8,000 to $10,000 per year.

Mrs. Wilson is a native Petaluman. She and her husband, Raymond, have three children, Suzanne, William and Gregory.

Farm Bureau In Opposition To Lot Sizes

The Marin County Farm Bureau has voted against 60-acre minimum lot sizes for agricultural preserves in West Marin, a limit proposed by the Marin County planning commission Feb. 29.

Alfred L. Poncia said directors voted Tuesday that the zoning should remain in two-acre zoning with one homesite for each two acres.

Poncia, a Tomales dairyman who has been bureau president for the past three years, has retired, leaving the bureau temporarily without a president.

Reelected were James Spaletta of Point Reyes Station as first vice president; Richard Respini of Marshall, second vice president, and Richard C. Grossi of Inverness, treasurer.

AND THE BROOMSTICKS FLY

"Bedknobs and Broomsticks," a Walt Disney Production, will open Friday for a two-week run at the Tamalpais Theater in San Anselmo. The film, billed as family entertainment, features Angela Lansbury. Others include Roddy McDowall, Sam Jaffe, John Ericson and Reginald Owen. Matinees will be offered beginning next Saturday through Easter vacation.

Audition For 'Lovers' Set

The Axion Players, a teenage theater group, will hold auditions next week to cast its second production, "Lovers," by Brian Friel.

Performers between 14 and 19 years old are eligible, although the roles will include portrayal of men and women in their 50s and 60s, according to Russ Blum of 61 Legend Road, Sleepy Hollow.

Tryouts for the "winners" segment of the cast will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Little Theater of Sir Francis Drake High School. The "losers" tryouts will be in the same place at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Crew members will be accepted at both sessions, Blum said.

The tragicomedy will be performed May 26 and 27 and June 2 and 3 in the Drake theater.

Structured Class Idea On Agenda

Mill Valley School District trustees, meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at Park School, will consider the request of a group of parents that one section of the district's new middle school be composed of structured classrooms as opposed to open classrooms planned for the entire school.

Dr. Sheldon Wolff xrought up the idea at the board's last meeting. He told the board about 50 parents did not believe appropriate alternates to the open classroom would be offered at the school.

He said there were problems with a completely open, ungraded class that would outweigh potential advantages.

SPRING GARDENING

All about the good earth, what to plant in it and how. Tips on gardening, do-it- yourself, garden equipment - everything.

It Looks Like A Record Gardening Year

By WAT TAKESHITA

Booming business among Marin nurseries indicate that the county's home gardeners are off to a record year of spading, weeding, planting and beautifying.

One Marin County nurseryman when contacted reported the biggest January and February sales he has ever recorded.

He and his colleagues in the trade attributed the boom in gardening activity to an early spring weather and the growing concern with ecology.

"Ecology is a big thing," said the nursery owner. "The interest is not only in growing things to clean the air but also in screening of homes to cut noise and fumes."

THE SPOKESMAN said the trend toward home gardeners this year is toward citruses. "Limes and lemons, both standard and dwarf, are in great demand, and oranges come a close second. People are also looking towards the flowering shrubs and trees like daphnes, plums and cherries."

Popular as ever are the good old standbys like geraniums and pelargoniums, and the artistocrats of the home garden — rhododendrons, azaleas, and camellias.

Another nursery owner noted with satisfaction the increasing number of young people among his clients. "Ecology isn't just talk," he said. "They are really interested in plants and planting. Many of them do not have their own homes as yet and so they usually prefer the smaller plants that can be grown in containers."

CITRUSES ARE increasingly popular for several reasons, said this nurseryman. For one thing, people realize that they do well in Marin. Also, the true dwarf citruses have been developed so that people can grow them in containers and still get a good harvest of fruit. "It's like having the cake and eating it too."

It's time to start shopping around for summer vegetables like tomatoes and summer flowers like petunias and marigolds, he added.

Marin's amateur gardeners who get the urge to plant vegetable gardens might take a few tips from the Marin County farm adviser's office in the Marin County Civic Center.

FARM ADVISER Donald L. Brittsan made the following suggestions:

SOIL — Unless you are among the fortunate few, the soil you'll be working with is a clay or clay loam. To have the most success with your garden, organic matter (humus, compost) should be incorporated into the soil. Depending on your philosophy, chemical fertilizers can be incorporated into the soil at the same time.

WHAT WILL grow in Marin? A wide range and variety of garden vegetables can be grown here, but you may have to rule out watermelons, cantaloupes and those vegetables that require abundant hot weather.

WHAT TO plant — For the summer vegetable garden, you must wait until all danger of frost is past. Usually April is quite safe here. You'll find, though, that April-planted vegetables start very slowly due to the cool weather. To get a head start you might consider starting plants indoors to plant outside later. There are many planting containers available which allow minimum root disturbance during transplanting.

Plants that can be started in April and May include snap beans, celery, sweet corn, eggplant, endive, leek, lettuce, potatoes, parsnips, peas, pumpkins, squash and tomatoes.

PEST CONTROL — If you want to use a pesticide, identify the pest, then use the specific chemical in specific amounts to kill the specific pest.

"Avoid overkill," the farm adviser emphasized. Read the label on the chemical all the way through to be assured you are using it in the prescribed manner.

Other information for the home gardener can be obtained from Farm Adviser Brittsan at the Civic Center.

A PLANT DISEASE that has been unique to Marin County is the hawthorne-juniper rust, which Marin County Agricultural Commissioner R. Allan Ballard has been fighting for several years.

During January and February, the county took out almost 300 juniper plants in the drive to contain the hawthorn-juniper rust. "However, this year, the spread of the disease seems to be less extensive than last year," said Ballard. "We should have less problems this year."

In many cases, when juniper turn brown, the trouble is not with any disease but with overwatering, said Ballard. All too often, the junipers are planted in conjunction with other shrubs that require frequent watering. This means that either one or the other of the plants will suffer.

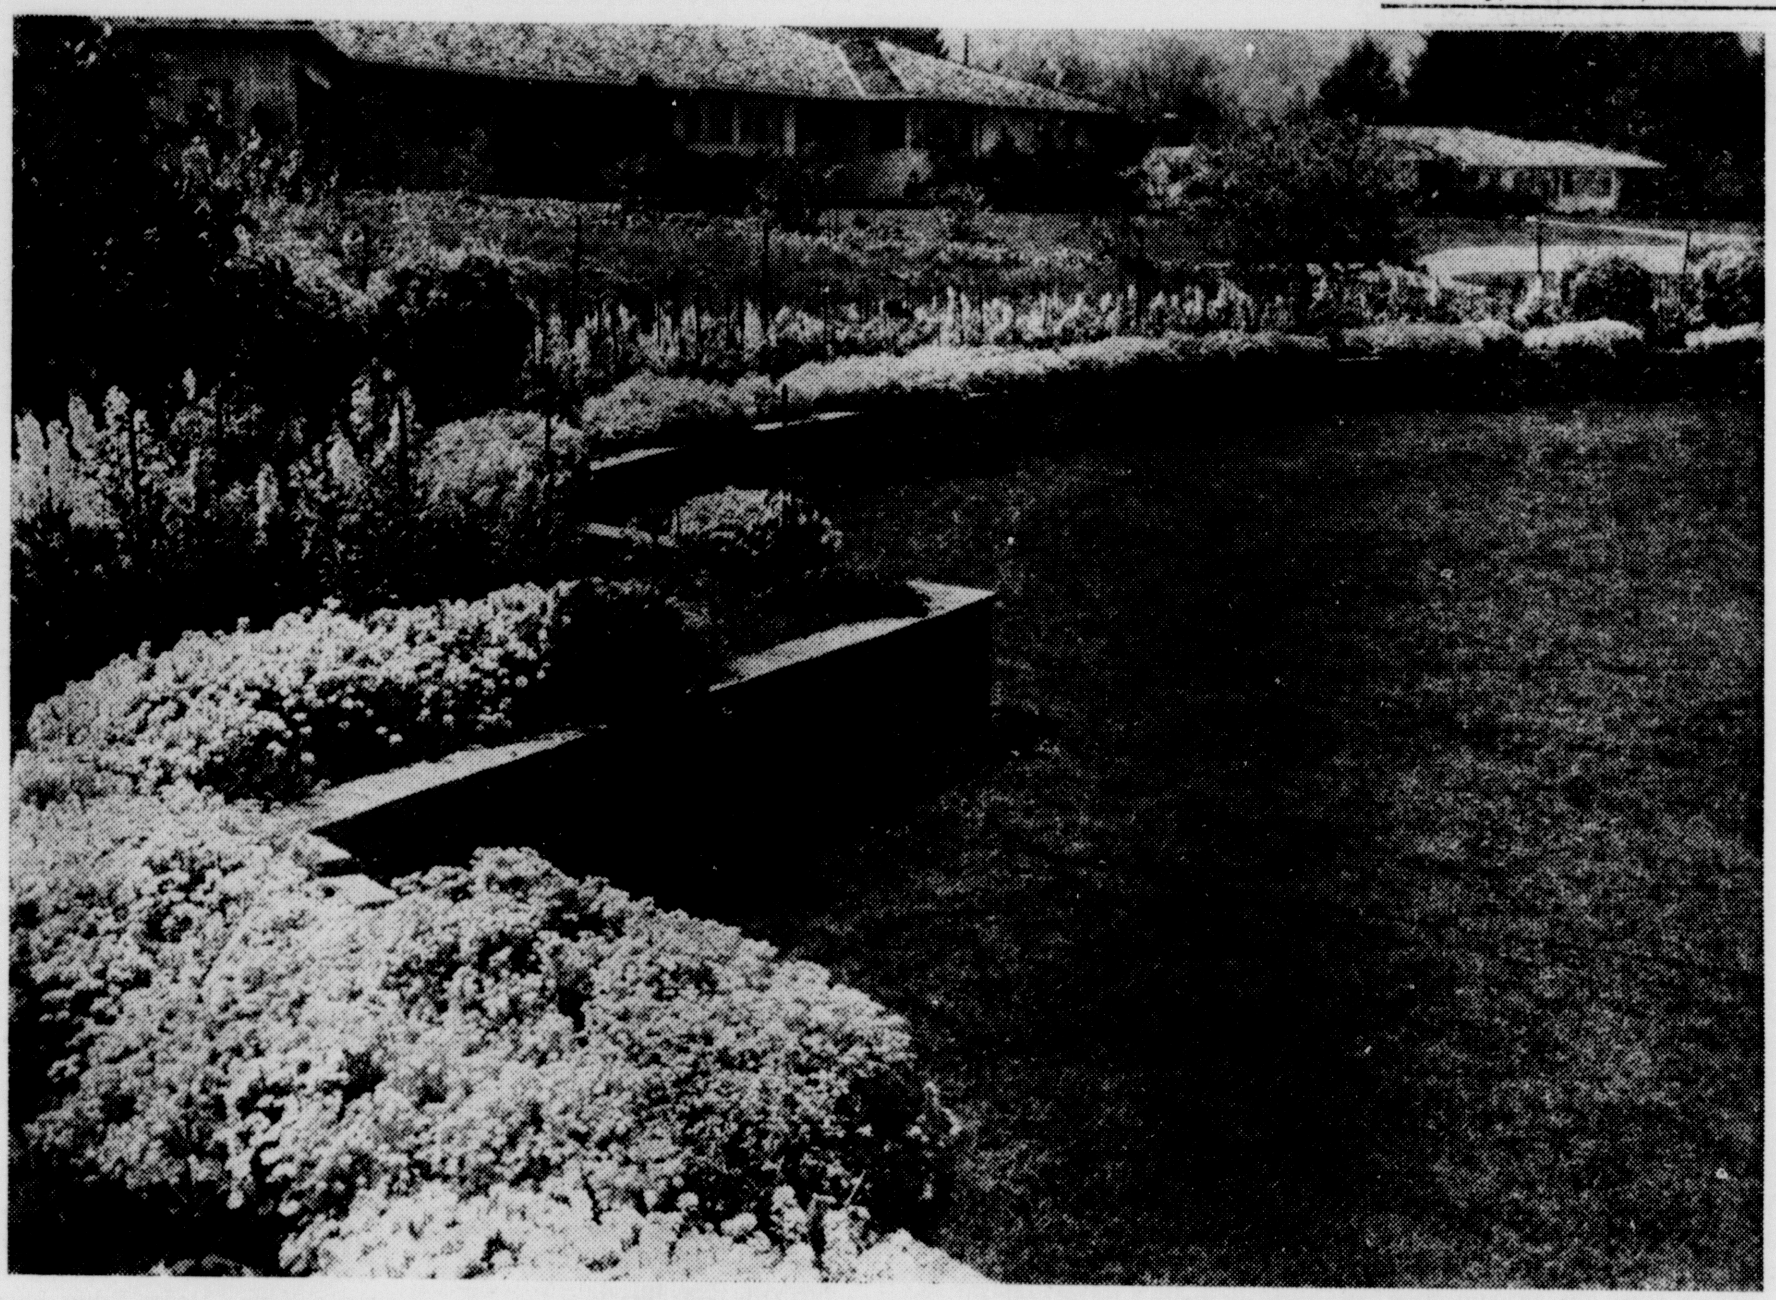
THE AGRICULTURAL commissioner said prices of farm products in general seem to be on slight increase.

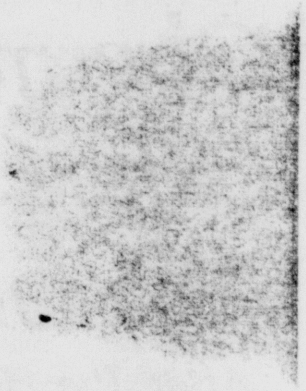
The total heads of cattle and calves in Marin County showed a 10 per cent drop in 1971 and a slight increase in the price per pound. Some dairies are cutting back or phasing out because of strict restrictions against water pollution and also because of pressure from subdivision development.

Poultry production, on the other hand, increased considerably in 1971 over 1970. The biggest increase was in the Tomales area where one poultryman doubled his inventory.

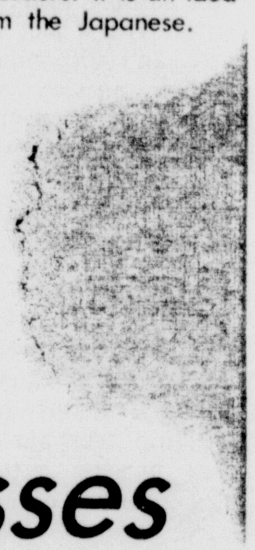
Milk production per cow and butterfat content are both on the increase because of improved efficiency in dairying, said Ballard. However, milk price showed a slight increase last year.

ROSES IN CONTAINERS add an especially lovely touch to the patio. And you can take their beauty with you, wherever it is most needed — to the poolside, out into the garden, at the entry to the house, even for a time indoors. The Better Homes and Gardens "New Garden Book" points out that the spectacular grandiflora roses are especially effective when grown in containers. It recommends that type for best results and best decor.





AN UNOBSTRUCTED expanse of central lawn creates an effect of openness in this lawn. And around this oasis of restful green a colorful frame has been provided of stocks and alyssum in bloom in raised borders two cinder blocks high. By avoiding any abrupt visual line between their garden and the neighbors, the occupants of this home also "borrow" from the adjoining property. Such taller plants as are used are massed at the sides behind the borders. It is an idea adapted from the Japanese.



A Whole Wave Of New Lawn Grasses

Biggest news on the lawn front is a wave of new grasses.

This year the lawnmaker has not only old favorites such as Merion and Arboretum bluegrasses, Pennlawn and Illahee fescues, Highland bentgrass, but a wealth of new selections.

Baron, Fylking and Pennstar are some of the new "show-off" Kentucky bluegrasses. They are backed by pedigreed workhorse varieties such as Arista, Prato and Park.

Jamestown and Highlight set the fashion pace among fine fescues, and Ruby seems quite a comer for seed mixtures. Exeter and Holfior head the colonial bentgrass parade, and of course Penncross is a creeping bentgrass standout.

The new perennial ryegrasses are receiving great acceptance; Manhattan, Compas, Pelo and NK-100 are among those newly "arrived."

AS FOR equipment, there is much that is new.

Most intriguing are the riding mowers, some of which have every accessory short of air conditioning. It soon may be hard to get hubby to come in before dark "because it's so much fun to mow the lawn."

While you are about it, get a well-made, big-enough mower that is easily serviced. The perfect mower has yet to be designed, but take heart that as the horsepower goes up noise pollution seems to be coming down. At least America has emerged from the dark ages of mower design, when you couldn't set clipping height without tools nor adjust it high enough for bluegrass-fescue.

Most of today's riding mowers do have reverse gears, maneuver conveniently and permit forward motion independently of mower speed.

THE 1972 STORY is somewhat less happy with pesticides, at least from the maintenance viewpoint (although perhaps not from the environmentalists' standpoint). Restrictions on chemicals make it difficult in some areas to procure effective products, and some long-used compounds can now be applied only by a licensed operator.

It is, however, still possible to buy phenoxy broadleaf weed killers for the lawn, effective crabgrass preventers, and biodegradable insecticides.

LAWN FERTILIZERS seem to get better every year, being tailored especially to grass needs. Main nutritional requirement for almost any lawn is nitrogen, and few, indeed, are the turf fertilizers not rich in this element.

Most contain a good percentage of a slow-release material such as ureaform, which is great for sustained feeding of grass and avoidance of "soft" growth susceptible to disease.

Research continues to uncover advantages from potassium (it often improves hardiness in grass), and the essentiality of phosphorus is well recognized. The exact quantities needed of these major nutrients can be determined only by soil test, but since neither potassium nor phosphorus is costly, they are perhaps well included in lawn foods at a ratio of about one-third of the nitrogen.

Variability Pays Dividends In Seeding Yard

Variability has been of great aid to plants during their long evolutionary history, enabling them to meet environmental challenges.

Some plants, because they varied, succeeded better and survived while unchanging forms met extinction. By the same token a measure of variability or diversity among the grasses in your lawn provides flexibility for countering adversity.

A lawn planted solely to a highly bred bluegrass, fine fescue or bentgrass, can, indeed, be superlative, — so long as suitable growing conditions persist. Great, where, as with a golf green, grass needs are constantly watched!

But it's a bit riskier if only a single variety is planted in a home lawn, considering the range of soil types, mowing heights, disease inducements, etc. likely to be encountered.

HIGH GROUND and low, shade and sun, soil pockets of varying mineral content are all found on any property. So, just as variability and diversity enhance survival value in an evolutionary sense, it can better insure grass persistence under changing lawn conditions. And lawn conditions are always changing — seasonally, when the weather turns, because mowing is neglected or fertilizer misapplied, as equipment wears paths and compacts soil, and so on.

Such happenstances affect almost every lawn.

There are two approaches to introducing variability into your lawn. One is to plant grasses which have a broad genetic base, — i.e., use species or varieties not too rigidly selected for uniformity. Traditional lawn favorites such as Arboretum bluegrass and Highland bentgrass are of this nature, and not much different from those tailor-made polycross varieties such as Pennlawn fescue, Penncross creeping bentgrass and Manhattan perennial ryegrass that have been so outstanding.

BUT GENETICALLY restricted varieties are needed, too, in order to provide grass populations in which all plants behave exactly alike. This is fully achieved with clones that are propagated vegetatively, as with leading bermuda grass selections. A similar degree of uniformity is approached by the highly apomictic (non-sexual seed) Kentucky bluegrasses including Baron, Fylking, Merion, Nugget, Pennstar and Sydsport.

Only a bit more variable because of their sexuality are the remarkably uniform "pure lines" grown in isolation, including such outstanding new varieties as Jamestown, Highlight and Ruby fine fescue, or Exeter and Holfior colonial bentgrasses.

After the plant breeder has "done his thing" in creating a pure line, the seedsman steps in to reinstate some of the variability lost during breeding. He accomplishes this by deliberately mixing two or more varieties.

Research centers all over the country counsel blends for general lawn plantings, and mixtures are becoming ever more popular in commercial sod, too. It is a particularly wise idea in Marin.

Perhaps two or three bluegrass varieties will be mixed, giving some assurance that no single disease is likely to decimate all varieties. Or Kentucky bluegrasses and fine fescues are combined to take advantage of bluegrass's great sod forming ability on good soil in the open, and fescue's tenacity on poorer soils and in the shade. The trick, of course, is to choose compatible grasses, rather similar in appearance, and responding to the same mode of lawn keeping.

IN COMPOUNDING the top lawnseed mixtures, fine fescues are invariably included because of their ability to withstand shade and to conquer poor soil. Even with little fertilization fescues are known to persist on impoverished soils.

Fescues can usually be noticed persisting where growing conditions are toughest in the yard, such as under trees.

Fine fescues are of two sorts, the dense-growing Chewings variety, and the creeping types. Proven cultivars include Cascade, Illahee and Pennlawn.

Joining these stalwarts now are Jamestown and Highlight, noteworthy for "specimen plantings". Golfrood is another attractively dense variety which has received a fine press for its good shade tolerance during seedling stages.

Gourmet Gardening Offers Double The Pleasure To Grower

After The Harvest Comes The Enjoyment At Dinner Table

Among the world's happiest gardeners are those who grow their own vegetables and herbs.

Certainly there are none who derive more lasting pleasure from their gardening, for added to the satisfaction of making something grow is the joy of cooking with garden-fresh produce.

Even with only an apartment window box to garden in, you can sample some of this pleasure. With a plot 10 by 15 feet, you can really indulge yourself.

Your nurseryman can help you plan a vegetable garden and start you off on the right foot — unless you are already aware of the local adaptability of various vegetables.

VEGETABLES, commonly grown from seed include beans, peas, beets, carrots, chard, cucumber, corn, squash and radishes. Nurseries may offer seedling transplants of tomatoes, parsley, lettuce, peppers, egg plant, celery, broccoli, Brussel sprouts, cabbage and cauliflower. Some of the latter are cool season crops and won't be available at this time.

Onions may be started from seed or from onion sets. For large onions, sets are more convenient than seed, giving you the expected harvests sooner.

When it comes to herbs, your nursery will have most of the favorites available already started; or if you wish, you can grow any of them from seed. A basic list of herbs should include basil, rosemary, thyme, oregano, marjoram and chives.

GROW HERBS in the garden or in pots on the patio — near the outdoor living area and the barbecue. Growing a small collection of herbs in pots on a sunny window ledge above the kitchen sink has proven their adaptability indoors.

By growing the plants in containers, apartment dwellers and residents of mobile homes can enjoy the fun of gardening and thrill to fresh taste treats.

Some vegetables, such as tomatoes, can be grown in tubs for up-close gardening enjoyment on the patio.

Provide plenty of sun and water and the plants will yield bountiful rewards for the entire family's pleasure.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS, a member of the cabbage clan, are delicious when harvested while young, stripped of their outer leaves, boiled just a few minutes, and then seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Try some in your vegetable garden.

Starting Seeds The Easy Way

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

If you are inclined to sow seeds too thick — and many of us are — several kindly dealers have come to our rescue this season in various ways.

In fact, they have made it so foolproof that we scarcely have to know anything.

One of these "Operations Rescue" is the Punch 'n Gro kit you have probably seen in the shops. Each year a few more varieties are added to these preplanted kits. They really work and can save some of the failures familiar to the amateur seed starter.

LAST SPRING with one of these kits, my own and my neighbor's garden were abundantly supplied with all the sturdy cherry tomato plants we had room for. This year a new kit preplanted to Bibb lettuce is going to be punched before long.

You will find many different kits in variety stores, nurseries, garden shops and even supermarkets.

Directions for starting the seedlings are clear and simple, carrying one through to transplanting in the garden after soil and weather warm up. Punch each depression with a sharp pencil, water, and expect results.

READ THE directions carefully first. The Bibb seeds, for example, need 24-hour refrigeration.

Another way we are helped in seed sowing — this time outdoors in the garden — is with those amazing preplanted seed tapes. They are really quite a thing. Water-soluble tapes are impregnated with seeds at properly spaced intervals.

The tape is simply laid along the ground in a slight trough in prepared soil, covered, and watered. Labels come with each seed tape.

NEAT ROWS of vegetables can be raised in this way. Last year I raised Early Scarlet Globe radishes to try out one of these tapes. My radishes have always been planted too thick.

Many vegetables now can be planted via tapes. For example, you can choose from Detroit dark red beets, Danvers half-long carrots, Black Seeded Simpson and Prize-head lettuce, curled parsley, bunching onions, Swiss chard, Giant Beefsteak tomatoes — 17 vegetable varieties in all.

Flower tapes are avilable, too.

There are 21 tapes presently on the market. They include Royal Carpet alyssum, Sparky and Valencia marigolds, Dwarf Cherry Rose and Jewel nasturtiums, balsam, Powder Puff asters, early cosmos, double-flowered portulaca; cactus-flowered, State Fair, and Thumbelina zinnias; and mixed petunias.

TAPES MAY be purchased in garden shops, dime stores and via mail-order nursery catalogs. You will enjoy trying a bit of "tape" planting.

There is also a preplanted pansy kit. The kit is made up of six little pots in a planter. All you add is water and sun.

THE TASTE OF OYSTERS YEAR 'ROUND

Looking for something different in the way of a vegetable to grow in your garden?

How about salsify, sometimes called oyster plant because its roots, when cooked, are not unlike oysters in their flavor.

Salsify roots can be left in the ground over the winter for early spring use. For winter use, the roots can be dug up in the fall and stored, preferably in moist sand or in a cool cellar.

LET'S GET ACQUAINTED

It's spring again and with each spring comes a new opportunity for the gardener – start something new, do something different, do something better. If it's a new garden, there's the excitement of working on a clean slate and the chance to plan and execute things just the way you plan. For the Old Pro there are new varieties, colors and uses to work with; for all, there is the excitement of watching the bulb flower, the tree and shrub blossom, the vegetables and fruit produce a bountiful harvest, and the pruned plant grow just the way you want.

We here at Eggers join with you in this excitement. Our staff of experts is ready and eager to discuss problems and offer solutions and suggestions, but most of all, our stock of the finest chemicals and green goods is arrayed for your selection. Have a "Blooming Good Year!"

49er PAY DIRT

Rich humus compost of sheep manure, leaf mold and peat moss fortified with iron, zinc and sulfur and blended with charcoal. This makes the ideal mulch for a new lawn. It's completely weed free. Perfect for top dressing shrubbery and bedding plants too.

49er PLANT MIX

Marin soil needs plenty of husky humus to keep plant roots growing well and maintain a good, even supply of food for your plants when you feed them. Gardeners who use it love it and you will too when you see how much better your garden grows when you prepare soil deeply with 49er Planter Mix.

49er PLANT SPRAY

49er Bonanza Plant Spray is an excellent non-toxic combination year-round insecticide-fungicide with trace elements. This spray will control such insects as aphids, red spider, leaf eating caterpillar, mealy bugs, etc. and such diseases as mildew, rust, flower blight and leaf spot.

49er FERTILIZER

Scientifically blended for central California gardens this is the "meat and potato" diet of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium all plants need for vigourous and lush growth. Lawns can be kept greener longer with Gold Nugget Fertilizer.

THE SNAPDRAGON is only one of the many annuals that can be set out in the garden now and in the next few weeks to come. Some other colofrul harbingers of spring include the Pansy, Viola, Calendula, Iceland Poppy, Stock and Petunia.
(California Assn. of Nurserymen drawing)

Annuals To Begin Your Color Parade

As spring makes its presence known, Marinites can be setting out annual flowers which will brighten up their spring and summer garden with an abundance of color.

For quick color, there are several dependable performers to plant now.

Calendulas will provide intense splashes of orange, persimmon, gold, yellow and cream; Pansies and Violas will transform borders into bright masses of color; and there is considerable beauty and enjoyment to be had by planting tall, fragrant Stocks and Snapdragons.

THE DIFFERENT types of Snapdragons multiply their uses in the garden. There are dwarf Snaps for border situations, intermediate growers that combine handsomely with other annuals, and tall-growing Snapdragons for exciting accents.

Nurseries will have Ageratum, Marigolds and Petunias for planting now.

The small mounds of Ageratum, with unique shadings of blue, are natural go-togethers with Marigolds. The Marigold family is a versatile clan: Besides the popular dwarf varieties, there are tall African Marigolds — and in-between sizes provided by intermediate growers. Shopping will reveal many, many variety names in shades of cream, yellow, gold, orange, and mahogany (red).

PETUNIAS HAVE risen from just an ordinary summer garden flower to a hybridized favorite in ruffled and double forms — in colors and combinations of colors that defy description.

There isn't any practical way to mention the dozens of varieties of Petunias. Full color illustrations at the nursery make identifying the specific varieties simple — and choosing Petunias a fun experience.

April and May are peak times for planting summer-blooming annuals, but by planting at the earliest gpportunity — as plants first become available — you can take full advantage of the colorful opportunities which exist. Zinnias, Asters, Periwinkle, Verbena, Dwarf Dahlias, plus others, are also available now or will be shortly.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Ceanothus and other California natives are in bloom this month. These make easy-to-care-for landscape shrubs.

✔ Now is the time to plant Transvaal Daisies for bloom later in spring and summer. Assure good drainage for the plants.

✔ For a shady corner, Azaleas are an excellent choice. Nurseries have plants in bloom, making selection easy — and fun.

✔ Tree roses are exciting accents for the garden. Now is a good time to plant them.

✔ Check with your nurseryman on crabgrass control. Don't delay your campaign against this lawn pest.

It's Feeding Time For The Plants In Your Garden

The growing season has started, and now is the time garden plants would like some food.

Before starting to feed, consider the needs of the various plants and the nutrients that are available.

For example, Azaleas, Camellias and Rhododendrons all like a food on the acid side at this time of year. The packaged dry forms available in nurseries, which come under several brand names, usually contain cottonseed meal. The liquid-form foods for these plants generally have a fish base.

FEED FLOWERING plants such as Fuchsias, Geraniums, and Pelargoniums with a plant food with a high ratio of phosphoric acid.

To get good growth on perennials like Chrysanthemums and Carnations, use a material with a good potash content.

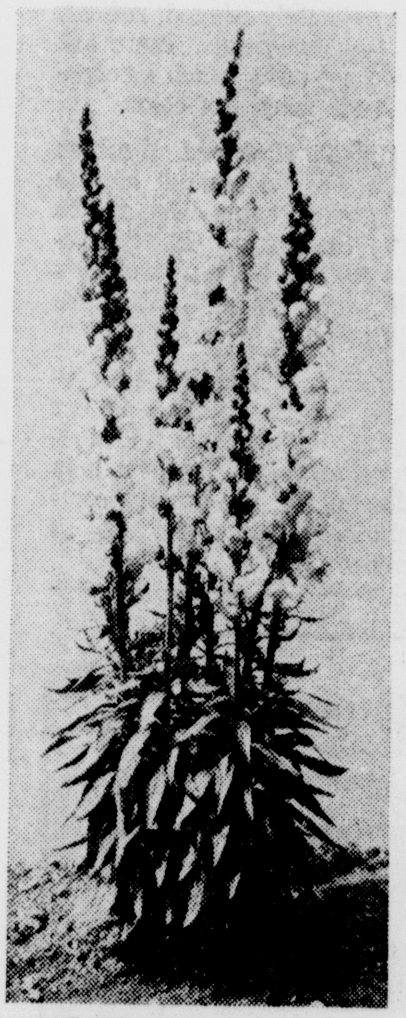
If this sounds confusing, it needn't be. The California Assn. of Nurserymen points out that packaged, ready-to-use plant foods are readily available. Any nurseryman can recommend the proper products for the various plants in the garden. For many trees and shrubs in the landscape, a commercial "all purpose" chemical plant food may suffice.

SO IMPORTANT is the proper nutrition for certain favorites that suppliers package materials formulated especially for them. Citrus trees, whether grown in shrub or tree form, prefer a special formulation, called, simply, "citrus food." The same material is good for avocados, roses thrive and bloom prolifically with special "rose foods."

Few garden soils can furnish a continuous supply of necessary plant nutrients. Most soils yield the three major elements — nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash — but only very slowly. Commercially-prepared plant foods supply them much more quickly, and in greater quantities.

ALWAYS FOLLOW directions printed on labels of fertilizers. Normally, this calls for the soil being moist around the plants before applying plant food. After feeding, soak with a slow stream of water from the hose.

BRANCHY BASES



WHAT IS meant by "base branching," a phrase you sometimes meet up with in plant catalogs or garden publications? It means exactly what it says — a plant that does it branching at or very near its base. And this can be important. The plant that branches from the base — at the soil-line — provides longer flower stems for more usable cut flowers. And when there are several instead of one stem growing from ground level, it also means more flowers. If you make extensive use of cut flowers in your home, you might be wise to study the variety of plant under consideration as to whether it is, or is not, a base brancher. If all other factors are equal, or nearly equal, then base branching could well be a decisive factor in your choice.

There Are Petunias To Please All Tastes

The Petunia is one of the easiest to grow and a most versatile garden annual.

Petunias can be planted in Northern California from March until September. Petunias begin to bloom within a month of planting and provide continuous color for as long as six months, or more.

Is it any wonder the Petunia has become a favorite flower of Californians?

This popularity can be attributed to the fact that more people are learning what a valuable contribution Petunias make towards a more beautiful garden — the long-lasting beauty and fragrance to be enjoyed from their plenteous blooms.

THERE ARE single and double flowered Petunias. Both types are divided into two classes: multiflora (many-flowered) and grandiflora (large-flowered). The most obvious difference between the two is in flower size.

The color range in all Petunia classes include red and rose hues, violet blue, purple, orchid, shades of pink, white and a soft yellow. There are, also, spectacular striped or starred bi-colors, plus two-tone combinations with an interesting varied or lace pattern.

Among the large singles are Petunia varieties whose flowers measure up to five inches across. Some of the popular ones include the bright reds, Candy Apple and Tango; Happiness, a bright rose pink; dark Blue Mantle; light pink Chiffon Cascade; rose and white striped Crusader or Fiesta; and pure white Apollo.

THE SINGLE grandiflora Petunias can be planted in almost any sunny garden spot, where a bright splash of color is needed. They can be used to fill-in bare spots between shrubs, particularly in new landscapes.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen points out the large singles are a delight in pots or planter boxes — and many excel in hanging baskets.

The multiflora single Petunias produce profusions of flowers two-to-three inches in size. The effect is breathtaking — especially when they are massed in large plantings.

Newer varieties include Starfire (red and white star), Sugar Plum (veined purple) and a group called the Joy series. The series includes red, white, pink, rose, purple and a starred one.

AMONG THE double flowering Petunias are several whose blooms resemble carnations. The flowers are two to three inches in size and the colors are all tempting. There are combinations of colors in pleasing marbled effects.

Newcomers to this class are the Delight series —forerunners include such tempters as Cherry Tart, Apricot Tart and Plum Tart. Use these for a spectacular color show in beds and borders.

The large doubles have, perhaps, the showiest individual blooms in the Petunia kingdom. Flowers often measure up to four inches and most varieties have delicately fringed, ruffled, and serrated petals. There are choice mixtures which incorporate wide ranges of color.

PLANT flowered doubles where the individual blooms can be admired up-close and be easily cut for use in arrangements. Tubs, baskets, and beds near walkways and patios are good locations.

Petunias shouldn't be overlooked for their value as cut flowers. Both singles and double blooms last for several days and can be beautifully combined with other flowers in mixed bouquets.

WELL-NAMED is the new Circus Petunia, since the circus brings to mind rings and colorful swirling, twirling figures, and this new hybrid gives off an effect of perpetual motion. A 1972 All-America Selections bronze medal-winner, the Circus has frilly, three-and-a-half to four-inch-wide flowers with bi-colored petals of rose red centers and white edges. It is a grandiflora Petunia.

A College Course In How To Keep Up The Yard

Home owners who do most of their own work in landscaping and maintaining the home grounds will find it pays to plan.

Pennsylvania State University's correspondence course in home floriculture was written especially for this group.

It is a general course in growing flowers and other decorative plants for the home. It covers basic gardening practices including soil management, propagation, care of annuals and perennials, roses and container-grown plants indoors and out. All are discussed from the standpoint of stressing easy, successful practices.

Quoting from the text: "Success in gardening depends to a large degree upon the personality, knowledge and enthusiasm of the gardener and the degree of his interest in plants. Knowledge of plants and their natural habitat and recognition of their light, soil and moisture requirements are helpful if plants are to be placed in the most favorable locations in gardens."

To receive a copy of the course send your name and address to Floriculture, Box 5000, University Park, Pa., 16802. Include your check or money order for $3.85 made payable to Pennsylvania State University.

For Healthy Plants, You Must Provide A Healthy Soil

Some gardeners watch certain plants struggle and decline in a poor soil, unaware the same specimens might thrive with vigor in a good earth.

This month is an excellent time to take steps to improve the garden soil.

PROBLEMS TO look for and to correct include:

1. Compaction, found in clay or adobe soil, where the nutrients are so locked-in that they aren't available to the plants' roots.

2. A poorly-drained soil goes hand-in-hand with compaction, as water settles in low places and remains there.

3. The opposite of the aforementioned is the condition where the soil is too sandy and loose. Soil is like a sieve and won't retain water or food.

4. Finally, there is the soil that is just plain worn out and needs to have trace elements and nutrients restored.

WHAT STEPS to take?

The remedy for compacted and loose soil is the same: Humus. Humus can be an organic material that leavens compact soil and adds bulk to a sandy soil. Nurseries offer many easy-to-use organic soil improvers: peat moss, leaf mold, wood shavings and bark specially-formulated for the home garden. All should be worked into the soil to insure a thorough mixture of soil and humus.

Improving a poorly-drained soil can be done by digging down and breaking-up hard pan that acts as a barrier to prevent the water from draining. A simple method, especially if you're not planting trees and deep-rooted shrubs, is to create a raised bed with header boards or bricks — and fill-in with new soil and humus to the new level. Be sure to work new and old soil together, incorporating liberal amounts of humus-type materials as you prepare the planting bed.

DWARF CITRUS, such as the Mandarin Orange shown here, make a versatile addition to the garden. They can be planted in the earth as part of the landscape, or they can be grown in tubs to decorate the patio or terrace. These smaller editions of the popular citrus reward growers with lush foliage, fragrant white blossoms, and colorful and tasty fruit.

Dwarf Citrus For Fragrance, Flowers, Fruit And Foliage

Who isn't looking for a tree or shrub that is both beautiful and functional?

In California, there is no lack of plants that provide both. And among the most popular choices are the citrus varieties.

Citrus is characterized by dense, glossy evergreen foliage. Waxy-white flowers perfume the garden and the colorful fruits can be left on the tree for decorative value.

Best yet, citrus can be enjoyed whether the garden is large or small.

NURSERYMEN have accommodated today's city-size properties by introducing dwarf varieties of all the most popular citrus fruits. The dwarf citrus lends itself to planting in modern landscape, and for growing in tubs and containers.

A hedge of dwarf citrus is a distinctive addition to the garden, while an espaliered lemon becomes a focal point against a fence or wall. What could be more fun than having a dwarf lime growing in a tub on the patio, where owner and guests could pick fresh limes for refreshing drinks?

Apartment owners, on their balconies, can grow and enjoy citrus fruits by utilizing dwarf varieties in containers. A real charmer — and conversation piece — is the kumquat, whose shrubby character is enhanced by an abundance of small oblong orange fruit.

GRAPEFRUIT provides the gardener with another highly decorative addition to the garden, but these are more difficult to grow in Marin.

Most citrus does require a fair share of sun and warmth to ripen the plentiful fruit, and are best planted in warm spots of the garden — against a south wall is one good place. Dwarf citrus in tubs will mature fruit more readily than trees grown in the ground.

The largest selection of citrus varieties — both standard and dwarf types — is generally available at this time of year.

Those Easy-To-Grow Glads

Gladiolus have become the most popular spring-planted flower bulb in the world, and also have attained top spot as America's favorite cut flower.

This great rise in popularity has come about because the "New Hybrid" Gladiolus are so breathtakingly beautiful, yet so easy to grow. There is no other flower in the world that can surpass Gladiolus in brilliance of color and beauty of form.

The new hybrid Gladiolus of today are far superior in every way to those varieties that were so widely distributed just five to 10 years ago. Today's Glads produce 20 or more huge perfectly formed florets, each measuring up to four to six inches across, on strong stately five to six foot spikes.

AND THE color range found in the new Glads is almost unbelievable. You can find varieties that will produce blooms in just about every color imagin-able, including colors not often found in the flower world, such as shades of blue, purple, green and violet. Besides the solid colors, there are also many multicolored varieties that have combinations of two, three, and even four colors in each floret.

The home gardener of today can plant Glads in their favorite color for the garden and can even pick out hues that will match their interior decorating when the spikes are cut for arrangements in the home.

These superior new hybrid Gladiolus have not come about as a matter of chance, but rather are the result of extensive scientific research and hybridization.

ONE OF THE world's leading Gladiolus hybridizers is Edwin Frazee of oceanside, Calif., who markets his new introductions under the Califlora Super Gladiolus label.

Each new Califlora Glad begins when the pollen from the flower of one variety is placed on the pistils in the flower of another. This is called "crossing" and each of the seeds produced from this "cross" will become a new and different Gladiolus.

Each year there are hundreds of "crosses" made between varieties that have the outstanding characteristics desired in Glads. The chance of one of these seeds producing a new variety worthy of introduction is approximately one in 20,000.

THE NEW SEEDS are planted the next season and each seedling plant that develops begins its long testing period. After two or three years the new seedlings produce their first bloom and each is judged for all characteristics. During the succeeding three of four seasons further evaluations are made.

Finally only five to 10 varieties will be saved from the original 100,000 to 150,000 that are started annually. These choice new varieties are then put into production and in seven to eight years after they were first selected, they will be named and introduced to the gardening public.

There are five outstanding new Califlora Gladiolus introductions for 1972 and they are:

BANANA SPLIT — Heavily ruffled golden yellow with red throat markings; BLUE LAGOON - bluest and most beautiful of all blues; CONFETTI - Fancy frilled pink with bold red and yellow throat markings; RED BUTTERFLY - Gay vivid salmon red with a touch of ruby and cream in throat; RHAPSODY - Soft salmon pink with a sharp red thumbprint in the center of each floret.

Gladiolus plantings, begun in mid-winter, can be continued late into the spring for a long show of color.

A NEW Gladiolus that won 1972 All-American Selections honors is the Miss America, boasting tall spikes of ruffled florets, in the purest of pink, a thing of beauty.

One Man's War With The Moles

For more than a quarter of a century Carl M. Hochhaus of Port Orchard, Wash., tried just about everything to rid his lawn of those dad-blamed moles.

At last, he said, he has found a sure-fire mole-chaser. He does it with windmills — not the large, water-pumping kind, but the small and decorative garden variety.

"I WAS ABOUT to give up and admit those animals were smarter than I was," said the 76-year-old retired machinist.

"It was just through accident that I found a small windmill would do the job. I made one for decoration, a real small one, and after awhile I noticed there was no mole activity near the windmill."

Hochhaus built a bigger windmill about 20 inches in diameter and placed three of them in his yard.

"THAT WAS about two years ago and I haven't had a sign of a mole since," he said.

Before the windmill, Hochhaus tried poison, smoke ombs, automobile exhaust and traps. He said he smoke and poison would disperse the moles but only temporarily.

"In a few days, they'd be right back, criss-crossing my lawn."

TRAPPING PROVED to be the most futile effort.

"Over the years, I managed to catch two moles, and I believe it was by accident both times."

Hochhaus expalined the windmill sends vibrations into the ground and that sends moles scurrying to new territory.

"The mole is a very sensitive little animal, and it can detect the least little vibration," he said.

THEREFORE, he added, it's important to have a windmill that is slightly out of balance and sure to produce vibrations.

Hochhaus mounts his windmills on one end of a stick with a wind rudder on the other end. This apparatus is then attached to a three-foot stake that is driven about 10 inches into the ground.

After that, the wind does the work with the rudder turning the blades into the wind no matter what its direction.

HE SAID HE has tested the four-bladed windmills he turns out in his home workshop in the yards of several friends.

"The result has been the same — in a few days, the moles are gone."

Asked if the moles take up new quarters in a neighbor's yard that has no windmills, Hochhaus replied with a chuckle:

"I suppose so. Guess the neighbors will just have to get themselves some windmills."

So, if plagued by moles, just build yourself a better — or wobblier — windmill, advises Hochhaus.

The Yard Isn't Really Right, If It Doesn't Include Trees

Many home owners believe the picture of a perfect lawn is one that contains two basic ingredients: grass and trees.

It may be possible to have a fine lawn with grass alone, but the addition of one or more trees adds dimension to the surroundings and enhances the setting.

In selecting trees for lawn planting, it is important to plant the right tree in the right place.

Large-growing trees may overpower the landscape, and screen out the view of the house. Small to medium-size trees should be used for planting in lawn areas, and happily, there is no lack of beautiful candidates to do the job.

GROWING IN popularity is the White Alder, which has a large, round head of shiny foliage which is densely arranged on slightly pendant branches. It has an open branching habit that adds interest to the landscape.

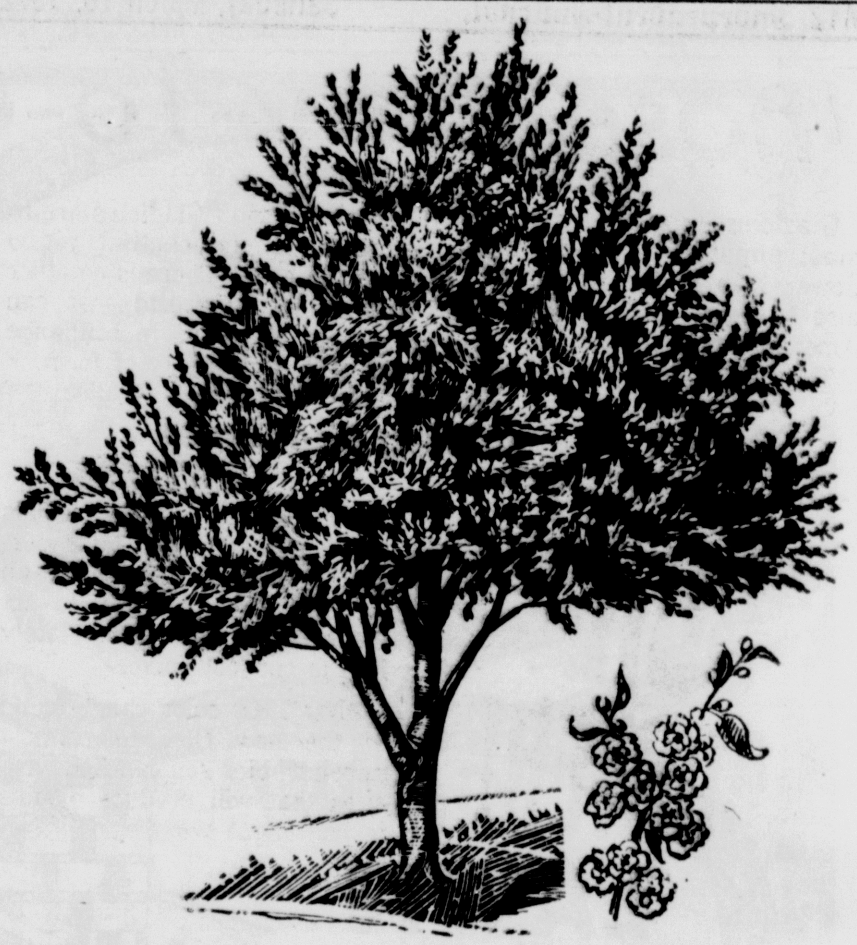
European White Birch is a longtime favorite for lawn plantings; the white-barked deciduous tree is slender and graceful, the branches are pendulous and create a light, airy illusion. A striking effect can be achieved by planting them in groups of three — four-to-six feet apart.

Another popular choice is the Sweet Gum (Liquidambar). The upright-growing deciduous tree has been a California favorite for years and whether it is used in the foreground, or to form the garden backdrop, its beauty is cherished. Sweet Gum is one tree which provides warm fall foliage to enjoy.

PLANTSMEN have introduced hybrids that create more brilliant displays of autumn color and these are worth shopping for: Afterglow, Palo Alto and Burgundy. Each has a special characteristic all its own when it comes to a colorful Fall performance.

Among evergreen trees for planting in lawn areas, the Magnolia family offers much enjoyment.

St. Mary's Magnolia — a smaller edition of the popular Southern Magnolia — won't overgrow its bounds, nor will the newer introduction, San Marino. It is a slow-grower marked by compact foliage on a dramatic structure. While it is just becoming available in California nurseries, it is destined for great landscape use in the Golden State.



THE PURPLE LEAF PLUM is one excellent choice as a modest-growing tree that will provide generous shade without overpowering the rest of your landscape. The Purple Leaf Plum comes in several varieties, with a diversity of foliage shades and markings. It is at its most spectacular in the early spring when it produces a lavish show of flower color.

An Old Question — Lawn Or Cover?

Lawn or groundcover for that special garden spot?

Which to use may hinge on many things: The terrain and what use you intend to make of it, the amount of sunshine available, and your temperament. All these, plus others, will have a bearing on whether you sow grass seed or set out groundcover plants.

Some home owners plant lawns out of habit, when a lawn substitute might be a better choice. While lawns do require more attention than do most groundcovers, there's no denying that a well-groomed lawn is a thing of beauty.

A BUSY SCHEDULE or simply a lack of interest might dictate plantings of Vinca Minor (Creeping Myrtle), or Hahn's Ivy, to reduce the size of a front lawn — or substitute for a lawn in the foreground of the property.

On a sloping terrain, where watering would be difficult, Trailing Rosemary or the profuse-blooming Trailing African Daises are logical choices over a lawn.

Potentilla or Carpet Bugle, with yellow and blue flowers respectively, might better fill in a shaded area where grass does only moderately well.

IT MAY PROVE more practical to plant Trailing Gazanias or Coyote Bush (Baccharis) in a poor soil — if you aren't going to improve the planting area with soil builders.

For situations where there will be foot traffic, and a play area for children, nothing can replace a lawn; nor should anything. What better surface than lawn grass to tumble and play on?

A carpet of green adjacent to the outdoor living area adds to the enjoyment of summer. But groundcover can augment this beauty — such as a border of hardy-flowering Gazanias — where you wouldn't want to accept a lawn substitute.

LEAFLETS ON LAWN GRASS

The lawn grass world is becoming more interesting these days — but more complicated.

A groundswell of new lawn grass varieties shapes up now that "patent protection" is accorded American releases. Excellent new varieties are at hand to fulfill a wide assortment of uses and cater to a range of tastes.

Leaflets citing the latest in new bluegrasses, fine fescues, bentgrasses and perennial ryegrasses can be had if a request is sent to The Lawn Institute, Route 4, Marysville, Ohio 43040 with a self-addressed, stamped envelope included.

THE SUN DIAL DISCUSSED IN DETAIL

In the foreword to her book, "Sun-Dials and Roses of Yesteryear," Alice Morse Earle explained her title:

"The union of the subject of roses with that of sun-dials has not been through any relation of one to the other, but simply a placing togethar of two 'garden delights,' — to use Bacon's term, — and with somewhat of the thought that as a dial standing alone in a garden was a bit bare without flowers, so it was likewise in a book."

That was in 1902 when the book was first published by the MacMillan Co. Now it has been reprinted along with several other books by Mrs. Earle — "Curious Punishments of Bygone Days," "Two Centuries of Costume in America," etc. — by the enterprising and imaginative Rutland, Vt., printing house of Charles E. Tuttle Co. as a thick $3.30 paperback.

It is quickly evident that neither the sun-dial nor Mrs. Earle's treatment of the subject has lost any of its charm. The gardener, in particular, will be fascinated by the wealth of information Mrs. Earle uncovered about dials, and will be delighted with her old-fashioned, chatty methods for passing it along.

Dialling, we learn, when Christopher Wren was a boy was a part "not only of an advanced education, but also of a plainer everyday schooling." Thus Wren as a stripling concocted an "extraordinary" ceiling dial, and as a 14-year-old translated Oughtred's "Geometrical Dialling" into Latin — and had it published.

Mrs. Earle included lengthy instructions for making of sun-dials including one of pine board that could be constructed by "folk of very slight education; among others the Negroes of the South... those who know very little arithmetic and a little geography."

There are portabld dials, vertical dials, horizontal dials, floral dials, hexagonal dials, obelisk-shaped dials, refractive dials, cross dials, goblet dials and ivory dials among others in the book. And there are dials associated with famous people and with momentous events.

There is discussion of dials as emblems and as memorials, of dial pedestals, and of dial mottoes.

And there is even some discussion of roses.

Seven decades have passed since Mrs. Earle wrote her book, but no one has since done sun-dials in greater detail or with more affection. Tuttle's decision to republish "Sun-Dials and Roses" is a commendable undertaking. It might just spark another surge of interest in sun-dials for the garden. Certainly there is something reassuring and inspiring about these devices that can do the same job now they did for ancient peoples, and which will be performing equally as well, and just as handsomely, centuries into the future. M.K.

A Garden Contest For Juniors

Plans for the 13th annual Young America Gardens Contest for youngsters ages 6 to 19 has been announced by the Flower and Garden Foundation, a non-profit organization.

Each contestant is required to plant and care for his or her own 200-square-foot garden. Those entering receive a kit containing a question and answer sheet and packets of seven kinds of flower and vegetable seeds donated by leading seed companies. The seed supply is limited.

In addition to completing the question form, contestants write a short story about their gardens and send one or more photographs that show them in their garden. Contestants compete in one of four different age groups, each with 10 cash prizes (starting at $200) and 10 honorable mention gifts.

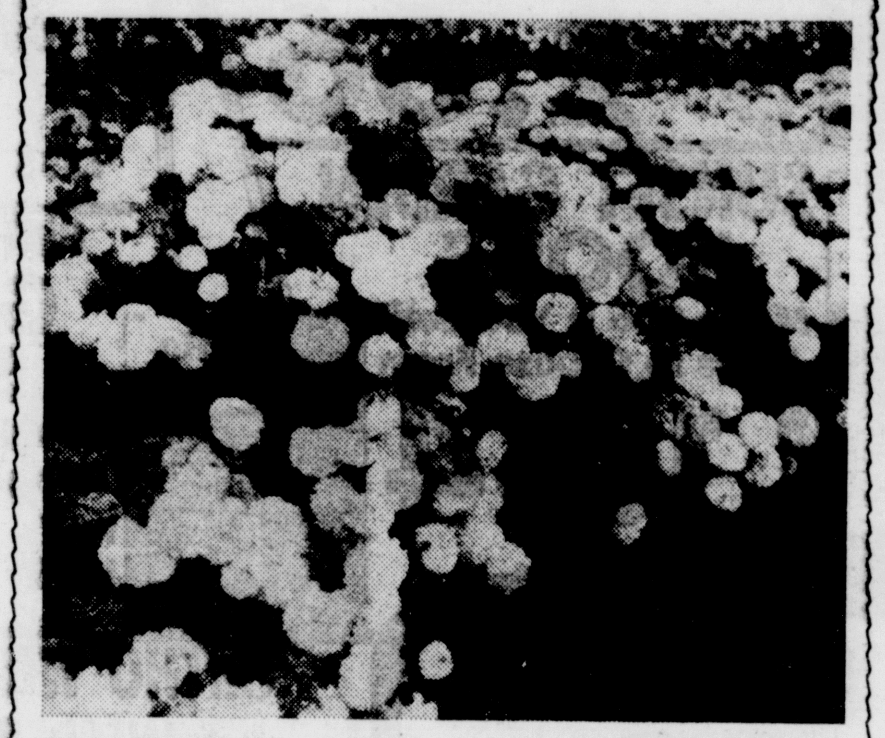
Each contestant must have an adult sponsor to advise on the garden project and co-sign the entry. The sponsor may be a parent, teacher, club leader or friend.

To enter, each prospective entrant must send 25 cents (to help defray postage and handling costs) to Flower and Garden Foundation, Box 3357, Rose-dale Station, Kansas City, Kans., 66103. Include name, age, address with zip code, and the name and address of adult sponsor. Contest closes May 15, 1972, and entries must be returned by Sept. 1, 1972.

Winners will be announced in the December, 1972, issue of Flower and Garden Magazine.

For The Shade

A pretty and unusual plant for a shady spot is mimulus.



GOLD GALORE is a new Marigold that produces as many as 25 huge golden yellow blooms on a single plant, and attains a height of 18 to 24 inches with an equal spread, making it adaptable for use as a hedge. The carnation-form flowers may be as much as five inches in diameter. And it earned a bronze medal in the 1972 All-America Selections.

Planter Boxes Fun In Garden

Mobile Home For Greenery

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

Some years back a Midwestern nurseryman was checking the dwarf apple trees I was trial growing for him in the California sunshine and smog. He proposed sending me some new-type blueberries to test.

"Where'll I plant them?" I asked. "Sun or shade?"

"That's what I want to know," he replied.

He had spotted several small drums, with the heads knocked out and drainage holes in the bottoms, that I had picked up.

"Try the blueberries in the drums," he suggested. "Move them around until you find the climate they like."

THAT ADVENTURE opened my eyes to the fun of planter box gardening. When a local garden center had a sale of large planter boxes I bought 20 of them. One became the mobile home for a daphne, another for a camellia. In two boxes I tried ferns.

In several planters fuschias have thrived five years without a change of soil, but with generous shots of plant food pellets each spring, when the new shoots break out of the gnarled old trunks.

To shift the planter boxes around more easily I had a sturdy dolly with oversize wheels welded together.

By trial and error I learned that morning glories like to germinate and start growing in the full sun but prefer shade after they come into bloom. In shady spots the Heavenly Blues stay open all day. Chrysanthemums grew best in the sun, then bloomed longest in semi-shad. With some shuffling by dolly, new crops of blossoms gave us color on the porch and patio nine to 10 months each year.

One of my friends calls himself a "patio farmer," because everything he grows — flowers, vegetables, bushes, trees, even vines — thrives in boxes which roll on casters. He shifts his dwarf citrus trees out of a plastic greenhouse each spring and back under cover before the frosts come.

Everytime I visit him he has re-made his garden on impulse by shuffling his planters around.

"Most plants don't need a lot of earth," he insists. "They just need a lot of nourishment and moisture. Feed them and they'll grow in small space."

Another ardent gardener retired a few years back and, to my astonishment, bought an apartment in the city. Whenever he came down to our place in the boon-docks, he invariably went home with bundles of fuschia and geranium cuttings. And sometimes little trees I had grown from seed.

"What do you do with all this stuff, Walt?" I asked him.

"COME UP and check the new pad," he invited.

When I did I was amazed at what he had done on a deck about the size of a double garage jutting out from his living room. In two dozen planter boxes he has a rose garden, an arboretum of dwarfed trees, and flowers with vegetable and herbs growing amongst th posies.

"From now on I'm a laz deck gardener," he told me. " bequeath you all my backbenc ing garden tools, I'll keep m trowel and my aerosol spray: Man, I've got it made."

New Dates For County Fair

The Marin County Fair, scheduled this year for Aug. 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3 and 4 at the Civic Center, San Rafael, will offer Marin's amateur growers more than 150 different horticulture and floriculture classifications.

Marcelle McCoy, fair manager, notes that, because of the change of dates from last year when the fair was held in October, the 1972 competition will provide additional classifications for the home grower, since a greater variety of fruits and flowers will be in season at fair-time.

THE PREMIUM book, listing information about the various classifications in the floriculture, horticulture and art departments, will not be available until May 1.

But Marin amateur growers interested in obtaining advance information about the 1972 competition may call Mrs. McCoy at the Marin County Fair office in the Civic Center.

Added classes this year will include four types of plums, three types of peaches and a greater number of potted plants, such as dahlias and begonias, Mrs. McCoy reports.

"WE WERE pleasantly surprised at the number of entries at last year's fair in October," Mrs. McCoy says, "but we expect a much greater number this year. The new dates are much more timely."

"Growers who are thinking of entering their flowers or fuits should contact me and I'll be happy to bring them up to date on the schedule for the 1972 fair," she adds.

The New Hybrid Teas

The rose is one of America's favorite flowers, and in Marin gardeners can enjoy the floral beauty of these popular plants for months on end.

While gardeners in the Golden State do rely on roses for achieving effects in the landscape, what wins plaudits for the easy-to-grow performers, undoubtedly, are the beauty and glamor of flower — with sturdiness and adaptability deemed as necessary qualities.

These important considerations are combined beautifully in the Hybrid Tea Roses, which, as a group, are the most famous of all roses. The hybrid tea class has achieved its status with exciting color, abundant and recurrent bloom, and excellent bud, flower form and size.

EACH YEAR, commercial rose growers introduce hybrid tea varieties in new colorations and hues. Only the best of these developments are made available to the home gardener. The new 1972 varieties became available for the first time in January, and it seems unbelievable that the rose hybridizers could produce such true masterpieces, year-after-year.

Illustrative of the skills of the rose hybridizers are the annual All-American Rose Selections.

In 1972, the award winners continue a tradition of breathtaking beauty. Apollo is called the "sunshine rose," and is the first yellow to capture AARS recognition in 10 years. Its long, pointed buds unfurl to reveal fragrant five-inch blooms of rich summer yellow.

The other 1972 All-American is Portrait, which produces large flowers of deep and creamy pinks which exude a delightful fragrance. The blooms are good for cutting; the bush is a tall, upright grower.

THE APOLLO is a new hybrid tea rose selected as a 1972 award-winner in the All-America Rose Selections program. Its five-inch blooms are a rich and fragrant yellow, earning it the name of "the sunshine rose."

OTHER NEWER introductions are available at your local nursery now. Shopping for the Roses is a fun experience for the family — because of the exciting colors and available beauty for livening-up the garden.

Some new varieties to look for are:

Touch of Venus, a hybrid tea which sports snowy-white blooms that are touched with the lightest splash of pink at the center. Very double flowers rate in the exhibition class.

Summer Sunshine is an excellent yellow — an upright and free-flowering shrub. The free-flowering habit of this one is sure to please. Another yellow arrival on the garden scene is Golden Gate, a vibrant yellow which has long-lasting quality as a cut flower.

The 1969 All-American, Pascali, is a profuse-blooming white rose which has received world-wide acclaim because of its performance in myriad climate.

A PLEASING shade of pink, with a dash of gold in the center, describes Day Dream. It is an offspring of Helen Traubel and Tiffany — impressive credentials, indeed. Very large flowers adorn this bushy plant.

Ole' is a hybrid tea with a dramatic shade of red that all but glows. The unusual flower form adds to the attractiveness of this profuse bloomer — whose flowers are numerous and excellent for cutting for indoor arrangements.

This barely scratches the surface of hybrid tea roses available this month, advises the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

Use Growing Things To Enhance A Home

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature living house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale — they're there because they enhance the beauty of the furnishings.

A glossy, tubbed Rubber Plant set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias, Philodendrons and Ivy call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point-up the charm of natural woods.

GREEN LEAVES trailing from a shelf add a finishing touch with taste; a graceful little Palm can add distinction to any room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one. More and more home owners, apartment dwellers and those who live in mobile homes are taking a tip from professional decorators and using indoor foliage plants to enrich their own decor.

Just choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers —and there are myriad types to choose from — in the kind of light the plants prefer.

SUPPOSE, FOR instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing type plant to cascade from a mantle or bookshelf. There are several choices in each category at your local nursery. You might select a Schefflera (Umbrella Tree) for the height you desire, a Peperomia (low and bushy), and a Grape Ivy to trail down from a shelf.

Adequate light for indoor plants is most imporant, and your nurseryman can advise you on locations and cultural requirements for specific plants.

FERNS WERE A feathery favorite of grandmother as an indoor plant, and their luxuriant, semi-arching fronds can still be used inside the house with refreshing effect. In fact, since grandmother's day, all sorts of new ferns have appeared upon the plant scene — beautiful ones such as the Bird's Nest Fern, the Boston Fern, the Five Finger Fern, the Mother Fern, and Maidenhair Fern, the Leather Fern and the crinkly Fluffy Ruffles Fern.

Plants Make Lovely Easter Gift

Because of the joyous nature of the Easter celebration, there is no more appropriate remembrance at the season than a lovely, living gift plant.

When it comes to shopping, there's no dearth of possibilities. There are many, many garden favorites from which to select.

Right now, for instance, nurseries have a huge array of Camellias and Azaleas in full bloom — ideal Easter gifts. These are distinctive landscape shrubs for shadier garden spots, and can be enjoyed growing in containers, too.

The color choices include the brightest red and pinks, to more delicate shades and combinations of colors, plus glistening whites.

NURSERIES WILL have a good selection of Rhododendrons for Easter giving.

It's too early for most varieties to be blooming, but the nursery plants will be loaded with buds and will unfold their floral beauty in the coming weeks.

They, like Azaleas and Camellias, must have good drainage. This is easy to provide by proper planting, using organic materials which are available in any nursery.

Dwarf Citrus is another gift choice that can be used in the landscape, or grown in a tub for decorating the sunny porch or patio.

PERHAPS A nursery-grown fruit tree would be an appreciated Easter gift for that certain someone.

Or, why not a rose bush for the family's garden? There are years of enjoyment contained in this kind of Easter gift. A new-for-1972 variety, or an All-American rose, is sure to win a big welcome for the rose as well as thanks for the giver.

An indoor foliage plant, such as a bold Fiddle Leaf Fig, would decorate that bare corner of the living room; and for the entryway, why not a few pots of blooming Marguerites or Calendulas?

Don't overlook as an Easter token of cheer an assortment of summer-blooming bulbs — Dahlias, Gladiolus, Tuberous Begonias and the like. These, like all living gift plants, provide seasonal highlights in the garden and forever remind the recipient of your thoughtfulness.

Publications On Growing Indoor Plants

U.S. Department of Agriculture research scientists have written two publications of prime interest to indoor gardeners.

Copies of both are available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

"Selecting and Growing House Plants," costing 15 cents and containing 32 pages with photographs and charts, describes procedures for potting, watering, fertilizing and caring for klorist-type plants, including such special problems as dim light.

It also lists alphabetically some of the outstanding house plants.

"Indoor Garden With Controlled Lighting" also costs 15 cents and deals with the construction of planters with lights, and lists the plants that grow well under such conditions.

Tokyo Offers A Blend Of Exotic, Practical

The Travel Pages

By ELIZABETH POND

Tokyo offers the traveler a taste of the exotic East with the comforts (and prices) of the practical West.

The elevators work; the traffic jams surpass New York's; the bargain pearls are just around the corner in the hotel arcedes. Yet authentic sushi (raw fish) bars, sukiyaki restaurants, and probably a stray festival or two abound, often within walking distance of the tourist hotels. And in the local nieghborhoods — which somehow maintain their own self-contained character even in a city of 10 million — men in kimonos stroll to the community bathhouses every evening just as their grandfathers used to do.

FOR AN AMERICAN, of course, Tokyo is the natural gateway to all of Asia as well as to Japan, and any traveler heading to Hong Kong or Southeast Asia might well schedule a stop here. Close to 400,000 Americans and Canadians did so in 1970, to account for half of Tokyos' foreign visitors in that Expo year. (Asians ranked second with 212,000, Europeans third with 147,000.)

There is plenty of tourist space available in Tokyo, ranging from the successor to Frank Lloyd Wright's famous Imperial Hotel to the new 47-story Keio Plaza Hotel to traditional Japanese inns, or ryokans. A visitor can either make reservations in advance or else arrange for a room after he gets here.

Japan's Travel Bureau's 24-hour telephone service can provide accommodations averaging 2,500 to 3,000 yen (a little under $10) for a hotel single, 4,000 to 5,000 yen (about $16) for a hotel twin, and 2,500 to 3,000 for a ryokan single with two meals.

RYOKANS HAVE less tourist information — and less handy shopping — available than hotels do, but they can be fun for Westerners who would like to live in a more traditional Japanese style. Service in ryokans is attentive enough to pamper anyone; sleeping on the straw mat floor is very comfortable; and the Japanese food, served in the guest's room, is delicious. (Any tourist who wants to live Japanese style should make sure he gets a real ryokan; however, some ryokans are "modernizing" by putting beds in and installing individual bathrooms.)

Assuming a traveler arrives at Tokyo's Haneda Airport, he can start by avoiding the hour's drive in traffic and zipping into the heart of the capital instead in 20 minutes on the elevated monorail. (That is, if he is traveling light, he can. The entrance to the monorail is a good 200 yards from the incoming international terminal, perhaps in an attempt to discourage overladen riders.)

Next, he can get information about tourist goings-on at hotel desks or from Japan Travel Bureau. There are a variety of bus tours, catering to interests in shrines, imperial gardens, villages, industries, restaurants, night clubs, etc.

A SIGHT-SEEING boat chugs around Tokyo's harbor (and gives a close-up view of the city's infamous pollution). One can eavesdrop on incense-smelling ceremonies, dollmaking, flower-arranging, swordsmanship instruction, and wedding kimono shows. One can visit a papermaking village or a bonsae (dwarf tree) village close to Tokyo.

One can go to performances of Japan's rich theater: the highly refined Noh, the more flamboyant Kabuki, the Bunraku puppet theater, or, more rarely, the Imperial Gagaku. One can take in a match of Japan's beefy sumo wrestlers or join meet-the-people or meet-some-teachers programs.

Guidebooks (such as Jay and Sumi Gluck's "Tokyo Inside Out," (Doubleday, 1969) and John Wilcock's "Japan on Ten Dollars a Day," (Arthur Frommer Inc., 1971) are chockablock with other suggestions.

AND, OF COURSE, most tourists will want to reserve a little time for shopping.

With the new yen rate, bargains won't be quite as attractive as before revaluation (for Americans, anyway). But wives will at least want to window-shop — and probably buy pearls, silks, synthetic textile goods and handmade paper. Husbands will want to price — and probably buy — hi-fi and television sets, cameras and other optical goods, and watches.

By dint of diligent searching it is possible to get somewhat cheaper prices elsewhere in the city. But a traveler with limited time probably shops best in the hotel arcades — or for folkcraft in the Takashimaya department store or the Takumi folkcraft shop.

Stores are generally open from 10 in the morning to 6 in the evenings, including Sundays. (Different stores have different days off during the week, however, so it pays to check out closed days with hotel desks.)

GOURMETS —or just plain adventurous sorts — will want to sample eel, roast pheasant, soba (dark noodles), real honest-to-goodness Tokyo sukixaki with raw egg, Korean barbecue and myriad other delicacies. In restaurants — as in hotels, taxis, and practically everywhere else except night spots — no tipping is necessary; service is included in listed prices or automatically added to checks.

A few remaining hints to the first-time tourist to Japan; weather is roughly comparable to New York, only a little warmer. Chilly weather begins in October with the coldest point coming in January. The air warms up again along about April and brings cherry blossoms to Tokyo in early Mary.

If one forgets his raincoat, he can always buy a 100-yen plastic one in Tokyo — or a cheap folding umbrella.

Australia Recalls Its History With A Folk Museum

By HARRY E. MERCER

Australia's history is brief but very colorful and in recent years imaginative folk museums have been constructed to protray the early colonial days for the visitor.

These are not museums in the ordinary sense. They are authentic reproductions of pioneer towns that actually function as they would have in the times they represent.

One such folk museum is at Sovereign Hill on the outskirts of Ballarat, which is 70 miles northwest of Melbourne.

A MORE FITTING site could hardly have been selected. It was in the Ballarat region during the great gold rush of the 1850s that colonial Australia's economic life and social order took a completely new course.

The Sovereign Hill Folk Museum comprises a "Main Street" of reproduced buildings that actually existed during the gold rush — Dilge's Blacksmithy, Bath's Livery Stables, the Gold Office, Ballarat Times Building and the like.

Just beyond Main Street are the original poppet-heads of old mines and diggings that yielded more gold per acre than any other in the world.

SOVEREIGN HILL itself yielded over 13 tons of gold then valued at 14 million dollars. A small section of nearby Canadian Gully yielded 2,940 ounces of gold in 56 hours.

You don't need much imagination to realise what life was like on the Ballarat gold fields.

Attendants are garbed in the dress of the day — the blacksmith pounding a horseshoe, the Cobb and Co. stagecoach driver reining in his team of four, the Gold Office official weighing gold dust.

And sometimes gold is brought to the Gold Office by visitors, who are invited to pan for gold in the creek or dig for it in the old abandoned mines.

LOCAL OLD-TIMERS insist, incidentally, that there's still a lot of gold in them thar hills.

It was here in 1854 that diggers (sourdoughs), angered at high license fees and the arrogance of British troopers, rose in rebellion and declared Australia a Republic.

They built a stockade at Eureka and introduced their own flag, which bore the stars of the Southern Cross as the present Australian flag does, but minus the Union Jack.

THE REBELS were defeated, but most of their demands were granted and Australia was on its way to democratic independence.

There's a monument to the Eureka Stockade rebellion in one of Ballarat's superbly cared-for parks, which are themselves good enough reason to visit this historic provincial city.

CONSTRUCTED ON Sovereign Hill near Ballarat, 74 miles northwest of Melbourne, this town serves as an Australian folk museum, being an authentic replica of a gold rush days community of the 1850s. It is one of several such museums in Australia as the continent preserves its history.

"See, I say 'pig of a Mussolini' and no one arrests me," shouted one jubilant demonstrator on Rome's Via Veneto after the fall of the Duce. But another, more cynical and more realistic, shouted: "Say 'pig of a Badoglio' and see how liberty will chop your head off."

After Fall of Mussolini, There Was Still No Freedom For The Italians

WHO DEFENDS ROME? by Melton S. Davis; Dial, 560 pages, $12.50.

By DON KEOWN

Often defeated and routed by the enemy and bullied and disdained by his German ally, the Italian soldier was the target of considerable ridicule in World War II.

But journalist Melton S. Davis in focusing upon a particularly critical 45-day period for the Italians, July 25 to Sept. 8, 1943, demonstrates that it was not the soldier who deserved history's censure and derision, but rather his leadership, political and military, which with its inefficiency, opportunism and sometimes downright cowardice, sapped his morale and wasted his heroism and sacrifices.

The period of a month and a half which Davis explores in his book, "Who Defends Rome?" was, of course, the time between Benito Mussolini's removal from power by the Italian Grand Council and his restoration by the Germans as a Nazi puppet in what amounted to a German takeover of their erstwhile ally.

In that 45-day period Mussolini's successors compiled a record of incredible confusion and incompetence that thwarted the country's last chances for salvaging anything major of value and glory from the road to ruin down which the bombastic Il Duce had started it.

First and foremost among these architects of chaos and futility was Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the man chosen to follow Mussolini as head of a crumbling government.

Through some mistake in history Badoglio had come to be regarded as a military hero. In fact, he was inept, opportunistic, as authoritarian as Mussolini and tottering on the brink of senility, a total disaster to his nation in the all-important role in which he had been placed.

The man who put him there — King Vittorio Emanuele III — was no great improvement over him. Weak, vain without reason, the little monarch, having played "footsies" with the Fascists for decades, was more interested in saving his throne and his own image in history than in sparing his people further suffering.

At the head of the military disarray charged with the defense of Rome — whether against invading Allies or vengeful Germans was unclear — was placed one Maj. Gen. Giacomo Carboni, utterly unqualified by character or capability for such a demanding task. He promptly sabotaged what small chances existed for success.

Around these three figures of futility was assembled a motley crowd of shortsighted, avaricious, deceitful ex-Fascists and generals, the very men who had helped Mussolini bring Italy to the rim of ruin. They shoved it over the precipice.

The anti-Fascists, who had greeted Mussolini's fall from grace and power with such enthusiasm and hope, discovered themselves still in disfavor and even danger as the Badoglio government clamped down on them with an iron hand that was no less insensitive and autocratic than had been the mailed fist of the Duce.

These were times when the Allies were planning and staging landings in Italy. And when he Germans remained determined to resist the invasion, no matter what the cost to its wavering ally in lives, and in property including the historic landmarks of Rome and other ancient cities.

The men who took over the helm in Italy attempted a double game, dealing undercover with the Allies while attempting to keep the Germans reassured and amicable. They lacked the bargaining tools, the intelligence and the cohesion to pull it off, and in the end attempts to surrender to the Allies were badly botched as the invading forces bogged down still well away from Rome. It was the Germans who moved into the Eternal City.

There was a brave resistance to that occupation by a virtual handful of defenders, many of them unassociated with the men who had declared themselves the government of Italy and who now fled in disorder and panic, leaving common soldiers, lesser officers and civilians to do their fighting for them. Melton Davis' book gives a particularly vivid account of this courageous but hopeless defense of the beleaguered city. And of the fury and savagery of the vengeance the Germans wreaked upon their former allies in Rome and elsewhere as the Italians learned, too late, the depths of depravity and brutality of which Adolf Hitler's Nazis were capable.

Melton Davis, a veteran correspondent in Rome, tells his story in straight "journalese," with no special flair. But the account is readable enough and certainly revealing. The immensity of the cast and the difficulty in keeping all the many names in mind is a problem with which the less prepared reader must wrestle.

Davis also has some interesting observations upon the Italian campaign generally. He is in agreement with Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller who termed it "strategically the most senseless campaign of the whole war."

But the germ of the book lies in its dissection of the tragedy that befell the Italian nation and people. And there he spells it out simply and cogently: "The real fault lay in the disarray left by the king, Badoglio and the generals." To which he might have added the stage setting for disaster which had been erected by Mussolini and his incompetent cohorts, many of whom then stayed around to play new roles in a travesty so farcical that it might have seemed a Keystone Kops comedy, had it not meant death to so many men and destruction to so much property and treasure.

VIKING PRESS has published "The World Wildlife Guide" in association with World Wildlife Fund, covering in its 416 pages 179 national parks, 264 reserves and sanctuaries, and 206 state parks and other wildlife areas on all the continents. Offered is such information as how to get there, what plant and animal life you will find there, the accommodations, fees, admission schedules, dimensions, elevations, etc. Unhappily, our own Point Reyes is missing, and Marin goes unrepresented. But Loren Eiseley praises the handbook as "the most compact and comprehensive" thing of its kind that he has ever seen. The price is $8.95, and along with the fact-packed text you also get some 100 photographs, 10 species lists, maps and other goodies.

TWO NEW illustrated craft books by the Sunset staff and published by Lane Magazine and Book Co. of Menlo Park:

"Macrame" offers an introductory course in decorative knot-tying, taking up the esthetic possibilities, along with the basic techniques, and including special directions and projects for children.

"Woodcarving" examines the several techniques and styles practiced in that field, and emphasizes both functional and decorative carvings for the home.

Sleuths & Suspense

71 HOURS by Michael Mason; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 223 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In the terse, semi-documentary style now popular for conveying realism to fictional accounts of the kinds of things that have been happening in fact in the last decade with horrifying frequency, a new young writer deals with the dark topic of assassination.

The Soviet premier is scheduled for an American visit, and just 71 hours before his arrival in New York City the Federal Bureau of Investigation discovers a plot among ultra-rightists (favorite villains of suspense writers these days) to slay the visitor. Then it is a race against time and across the country to round up the rightwing fanatics and their hired guns before they can execute their cleverly-conceived assassination plan and bring about an international crisis.

Michael Mason, we are told, is the pseudonym for a young writer with a special knowledge of the working methods of the FBI (a former member?). That knowledge shows. On the other hand, in his efforts to develop an exciting plot, and to present the FBI and Secret Service realistically, Mason neglects the character of his cast members, so that they lack humanity and are almost automatons. But then, that is a popular picture of the G-man. And Mason's fast-moving story is entertaining if lacking in depth.

Books For Juniors—

Charles Perrault, 1628-1703, was a sort of French version of Hans Christian Andersen, a creator of fairytales that have survived through three centuries, as well as a prominent literary figure and court favorite of his time.

Cinderella, Red Ridinghood, Tom Thumb — these were all inventions of Perrault's fertile mind.

"Perrault's Fairy Tales" (Doubleday, $5.95) is a compilation of Perrault classics taken from his "Tales of Mother Goose" and "Stories of Olden Times," and translated from French to English by England's Sasha Moorsom, with illustrations, gay and colorful, by the French artist Landa Crommelynck.

It marks the first time, the publisher says, that Perrault's fairytales have been so collected, unabridged and in modern English. It is a handsome, engaging book, highly readable, quite likely to be cherished by its young recipients long after their childhood years, and perhaps passed along to future generations.

"THE DAY THE Animals Left the Zoo" (Doubleday, $4.50) is a fun romp by Donata Delulla, lawyer-sports enthusiast-writer, authoring her first story for children.

The animals in the zoo decide to leave its security for a more adventurous life outside. Their escapades are lively and varied. But in the end — here the moral of our story slips in — the animals decide they are happiest in the zoo under the affectionate care of Henry the zookeeper. The artwork is by the author's brother, John Delulla, and is somewhat uneven, sometimes quite striking, at other times seemingly a bit too impressionistic, even abstract, for the 8-year-olds and under.

Generally, though, it's a book that will amuse.

WENDY KINDRED resided in Addis Ababa for four years while teaching art history and graphics. She has thus chosen Ethiopia as the setting for her story "Negatu in the Garden" (McGraw-Hill, $4.50). Yeshi has two American friends in Phyllis and Tina. But her younger brother, 6-year-old Negatu, is left out of their fun. And the cat Dimit is poor consolation in the way of companionship.

His loneliness causes Negatu to sometimes do thoughtless things that further alienate the other children. There's a sombre note to the story in that it offers no real solution to Negatu's plight. And the woodcut illustrations by the author contribute to the mood.

Hardly a happy book for small children who might not yet be ready for this kind of realism.

"MANDY" (Harper and Row, $4.95) has a quite famous author, although you might not recognize her as Julie Edwards. She is far better known by her stage name Julie Andrews. And "Mandy" is very much the kind of book one might expect from "Mary Poppins."

A 10-year-old leaves the protection of the English village orphanage to explore the outside and finds herself a secret home in a deserted cottage. There she creates a dream life of her own. But in the end Mandy learns that reality can be even better than pretense.

No picture book, this is a story for 8 through 12-year-olds, probably best suited to 10 and 11-year-old girls, who, we suspect, will be charmed by the fantasy adventures of Mandy and by the happy ending.

"WEEPLE PEOPLE" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95) was created by D. Craig Gillespie, assistant professor of science education at the University of British Columbia, not only to amuse but also to stimulate the smaller children by getting them to participate in the fun and games. There are opportunities to create as well as to discern, as tykes are introduced to a jolly assortment of creations that include golliwogs, wuks and little lunkers, as well as the weeple people. And the colorful artwork tickles the ribs, while large printing poses the questions and the challenges. It looks like the professor has produced something of a classic for pre-schoolers.

Elizabeth Ann, the delicate and rather spoiled title character of Dorothy Canfield Fisher's "Understood Betsy" (Holt, Rinehart, $5.50) is horrified when she learns she must leave the city to make her home with her country kin in Vermont. And all the more dismayed when she finds there isn't even electricity in the farmhouse parlor. But the 9-year-old begins to adjust, and to discover the joys and satisfactions of rural life. Mrs. Fisher has a delightfully old-fashioned story-telling technique that youngsters are certain to find warm and intimate.

And the New England rural life she describes is irresistible.

Novelist Glendon Swarthout and wife Kathryn have collaborated on their fourth fiction book for children in "TV Thompson (Doubleday, $4.95). In this updated version of "Alice Through the Looking-Glass," young TV Thompson is lured inside the television console to share in the excitement and adventures — and the dangers — that makes up the world of video. There's a nightmarish quality to TV's experiences. And the result is a new perspective as to the part television should play upon or lives — both for TV Thompson and the young, up-to-12 reader. Cleverly done, and fairly effective in tis message.

Dell continues to print entertaining children's books in paperback under its "Yearling Book" label, it latest batch including the classic tale of Reynard the Fox, Andrew Norton's "Rogue Reynard," with black and white art by Larua Bannon, and another pleaser with animal characters, Robert Lawson's "Edward, Hoppy and Joe" in which the central figures are a rabbit, a toad and a possum, three adventure-prone pals. These are stories in the time-proven Peter Rabbit radition. At 75 cents per book, they are perfect for the child whose interest lies more in a good story than in elaborate illustrations.

A SELF-PORTRAIT by the great German artist Kathe Kollwitz is included among the many illustrations for "Kathe Kollwitz: Life in Art" by Mina C. and H. Arthur Klein, the first English language full biography of a great, in creativity and courage, woman. While the publisher, Holt, Rinehart and Winston Inc., labels the $11.95 book as "for ages 12 and up," it is sufficiently mature for adults interested in the inspiring story of a woman who, while living in the dark shadows of Nazi persecution, kept alive in her mind a far different kind of liberation than that embraced by today's movement. Stubbornly she maintained her artistic independence and integrity, and at her death she still had not surrendered to her arch and evil enemy Adolf Hitler.

TEACHING THE TEACHER HOW TO TEACH ART

Chester Jay Alkema teaches teachers how to teach art to children at Grand Valley State College in Allendale, Mich.

The essentials of his successful course there are now available in book form from Sterling Publishing Co. under the title "Alkema's Complete Guide to Creative Art for Young People."

It is a long title, and a lot of book, covering a lot of territory, and commanding a fair-sized price, $9.95.

The challenge, he says, is not to direct children in their drawing or painting, but rather to get the creative juices to flowing so that the tykes come up with their oxn creations.

A number of possible sources of inspiration are explored — stories and poems, music and dance, travel, make believe, holidays, daily happenings, etc.

There is also some instruction in technique with pens, crayons, chalk, paints, scraps and other media.

And it is a profusely and effectively illustrated book, with many of the pictures in color.

Translating such inspiration via the printed page is difficult. It is an intuitive thing with which we are dealing. But Alkoma is cognizant of the problem and of his limitations. And within the realms of possibility, he seems to have carried out his mission very well. Teachers and parents should indeed benefit from what they learn to do — and not to do. M.K.

Here The Massage Is The Message

THE MASSAGE BOOK by George Downing; Ramdom House and The Bookworks, 184 pages, $3.95. Maxine Keown.

A pair of young Bay Area residents, George Downing, who teaches massage and body awareness at Esalen Institute in San Francisco, and illustrator Anne Kent Rush, who also teaches the same subjects, have collaborated on this soft-cover book after discovering the lack of a satisfactory text on massage that they might recommend to their students and others.

"To do massage," they begin, "is physically to help someone, to take care of them. It is for anyone with whom you feel prepared to share an act of physical caring."

And they refer to massage as a "unique way of communicating without words. . .In its essence massage is something simple. It makes us more whole, more fully ourselves. Your hands have the power to give this to others."

Then they urge: "Learn to trust that power and you will quickly find out better than anyone can tell you what massage is all about."

The pages that follow represent their effort to entice the reader into making that discovery. The book falls into three parts, a section of general background information on massage, a section on basic massage techniques, and finally a section on more advanced and specialized methods. Included in that last part are chapters on self-massage, on zone therapy (working on the feet where, according to the theory, lie the root ends of nerves running to all parts of the body), meditation, tai chi chaun (often practiced by the Chinese in conjunction with massage), and, yes, erotic massage. "Bet you turned to this chapter right away, huh?" begins that last.

It is, however, only a small part of a quite serious book by two young people unquestionably convinced of the value of their subject and their material. Downing's text is intelligible and informative, and his illustrator's simple but explicit drawings lend further clarification and understanding.

Given the interests of these times, the pair and their publishers may well have themselves a minor, or not-so-minor, best-seller.

The New York Of The 1950s Remembered With Nostalgia

THE PARTY'S OVER NOW by John Gruen; Viking, 282 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Jim Williams.

Paris in the 1920s and '30s; New York in the '50s.

From the pages of John Gruen's look at the 1950s, New York was the place. In a series of personal reflections and interviews with the now famous personages of that decade, Gruen provides a mellow look at the then rising artists, musicians and composers.

As he puts it: "I did not want to write a history of the Fifties. . .I wanted to write about what we were all doing and feeling then, because then had not yet become history."

In the period that Gruen remembers so well the Village was the place to hang one's hat. It was the Left Bank of New York. While Gruen admits to many frustrations, the struggling artist, musician and composer survived on comradeship. His book fully paints it as a "closed society of artists and writers."

You find personal thoughts on such painters as Larry Rivers, Elaine de Kooning; critics Clement Greenberg and Harold Rosenberg and composers Virgil Thomson and Ned Rorem.

Virgil Thomson, who Gruen credits with enlightening his composing period, adds his own personal touch with the account that ended his tenure as chief music critic of the New York Herald Tribune, stemming from a feud with Maestro Toscanini.

And also the late William Flanagan, composer and music critic, candidly discusses his close relationship with playwright Edward Albee before Albee's climb to fame with "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

Gruen, while describing the period as one diseased with "booze," is always thoughtful and generous in his observances — giving his subjects the benefit of the doubt.

The author, who had one time during the period served as a music and art critic of the Tribune under Judith Crist, arrived on the New York scene early in the '50s soon after his marriage to Jane Wilson, who climbed to the top of the fashion model ranks during the period and who also established herself as a noted painter.

Currently Gruen is art critic for The New Yorker and does occasional features for the Sunday New York Times Magazine.

While his book is rather nostalgic, it is finely written — a credit to his craft. And also — what is nice — he makes no apologies for having lived in such an unrestful period as the 20th Century.

IN A MADCAP POSE, Jane Wilson was pursuing her career as a fashion model when this photograph was taken in New York City in 1952. It is included among the illustrations for "The Party's Over Now," written by her husband, John Gruen.

The Private Story Of One Family

WASTED, THE STORY OF MY SON'S DRUG ADDICTION by William Chapin; McGraw-Hill, 216 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

I am an ostrich. I don't WANT to know about drugs. I looked at the title of this book and thought I am NOT going to read this book.

I finished it in one afternoon.

Drugs can't happen in Marin. Yet, "Wasted" is the story of a Sausalito boy who started with marijuana at 14 and went the whole drug route including LSD and amphetamines.

He tangled with the Sausalito police when his mother was a city council member, he played his drums at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley, he roamed the waterfront and watched the bongo players in the Plaza. This is Marin.

William Chapin, former columnist and copy editor for the San Francisco Chronicle, takes the reader inside his house, into the depths of his family. It is almost embarrassingly personal. . . he makes it so real. You wish to reach out to offer solace and comfort; to say, "It really wasn't all your fault. Sometimes these things just happen."

It all reads like fast-paced fiction. Still this is Marin. There is Tam High. Here is Stinson Beach and the first LSD trip. (You can see the dunes and feel the tall grasses where the kids sought shelter.) There is Marin City, the old ferryboat that doubled as a teen-age hangout, Marin General, San Rafael police station.

The book is so close, so private, it reaches to the depths of despair and yet is tender and compelling. You turn each page hoping circumstances will alter. That Mark will recover. That things will turn out all right. Waiting for the happy ending. It doesn't come.

No one could possibly have written such a gripping book if he had not lived it. No one could imagine such a chain of events; as if caught in a whirlpool, Mark seems to have no will, no desire for anything but popping pills or dropping acid.

Why? William Chapin does much soul searching. It was his fault. The father image was gone. He didn't spend enough time with his son. The rules were too relaxed. Tam High was wrong. Drew High was wrong. A psychiatrist was indifferent. Heredity was at fault.

None of these, all of these, or only some of these, perhaps.

Rarely has a book stirred such empathy, for this is where we live. If one parent has made a mistake, haven't we all?

"Our search (for help) continued even though we had no precise definition of what we were searching for. . . a medical solution." To countless doctor's offices, psychiatrist's clinics, mental hospitals they wandered. Commitment to Napa, to Mendocino.

Now Mark, at 21, is a self-committed patient at Mendocino, diagnosed as a schizophrenic psychotic.

"As I write this, it sounds too much like exhibitionism. Here we are. . . exposing all the things that are supposed to be hidden lest someone be embarrassed! But damn it, keeping them hidden hasn't accomplished much. The world's a nutty place. Maybe if we stop trying to keep our frailties hidden and stop being ashamed of things we cannot change, the scientist and the doctor will discover the causes of schizophrenia and a cure for it.

"And I wrote this book, which I like to think of as an expression of my love for my son Mark. Some day he will know that it is."

Wife Of An American Legend

BRING ME A UNICORN, Diaries and Letters of Anne Morrow Lindbergh 1922 - 1928; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 259 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Dorothy Gardiner.

It takes an extraordinary person to bare his innermost feelings and thoughts.

Especially if that person in her own words was "the youngest, shiest, most self-conscious adolescent that — I believe — ever lived."

But this is what Anne Morrow Lindbergh, writer, wife and mother of five grown children has done in this book containing her diaries and letters written between 1922 when she was a 16-year-old school girl and 1928 when she was on the verge of marrying Charles Lindbergh whose recent transatlantic flight had made him the most sought-after celebrity in the world.

Mrs. Lindbergh's own words preserved from the past vividly tell of the growing pains of a bright, sensitive and gifted young girl filled with the self-doubts so often experienced during those abyss-like years between childhood and adulthood.

But in addition to the rich insight into the humanity of a girl growing into womanhood, Mrs. Lindbergh enriches the historical record by revealing an intimate glimpse into the private worlds of two families — the Morrows and Lindberghs — who dominated the news scene in the 1920s.

A born writer and observer (judging from the material in this test), Mrs. Lindbergh honestly relates a crucial period of her life that becomes fascinating reading.

Along with revelations about her own remarkable family, there are commentaries on family friends, such as one concerning her father's associate, financier J.P. Morgan, whom the young girl perceived both as a "lion" and a lonely man."

Neither of Anne Morrow's parents were born to wealth. Dwight W. Morrow and Elizabeth Cutter Morrow sprang from sturdy midwestern Protestant stock whose lives centered around family, religion (both were Presbyterian), education and hard work.

Her father, son of a mathematics professor, tutored and borrowed money to put himself through Amherst. He became a lawyer, banker and eventually a partner in J. P. Morgan and Co., one of the biggest banking houses in the world.

While Anne Morrow was studying at Smith College her father was appointed ambassador to Mexico and later served as senator from New Jersey.

While the Morrows showered their children with material advantages — private schooling; large homes filled with art, books and antiques; a New York apartment; servants; travel, and internationally prominent friends — they also instilled in them their innate ideas on religion and a love of books and learning.

Paradoxically, their children exposed to the sOphisticate world of their parents, remained unworldly.

Anne Morrow's romance and subsequent marriage to Charles Lindbergh was headline news around the world 43 years ago.

In this account we are shown a shy, intelligent girl forgetting her own self-consciousness as she slowly falls in love with an international celebrity who she begins to see in a different light than many around him saw him.

Their love story set against flying excursions where Lindbergh, against the rules, relinquishes the controls, so Mrs. Morrow may learn to fly, are all recorded just as they happened.

For those who followed the colorful lives of the Morrows and Lindberghs four decades ago, this will be a rare return journey behind the scenes.

For those who came later there may even be more in the book — an introspective look at the development of an extraordinary woman of this century.

The publishers have announced that this is the first in a series of books covering the life of Anne Lindbergh.

Prefinished Panels Are Better Looking

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Handyman's Pages

If you think of prefinished paneling in terms of shiny, phony wood-grain patterns your computer needs new data. A walk through a local building supply store or lumberyard should provide the proper input.

A new generation of patterns and colors have matured in the field of prefinished paneling, and even the finish itself has been improved. Most of it is resistant to heat, moisture and alcohol, so the panels can be used on counter surfaces as well as walls.

Marlite is one of the trade names you no doubt have noticed lately. They have introduced some handsome decorative panels and have gathered a good palette of colors.

THE BAR AREA shown at right is an example of this broader use of the prefinished sheets.

The area was designed by Karl Steinhauser as an adjunct to the existing living room. The owners wanted to extend the back of the house toward the pool area and provide a snack bar that could take a beating from kids in bathing suits, yet be used for more elegant entertaining.

So Steinhauser chose the Marlite paneling in a bold, solid-color blue and in a lighter blue design that looks like tile. The blue tile pattern covers the counter surface of the bar and continues on up the back wall. Bands of bright blue frame the tile and form splash-proof backgrounds for refreshment storage shelves and work counters behind the bar.

IN KEEPING WITH a collection of accessories from the Dutch East Indies, Steinhauser chose Indian lighting fixtures. Some brass fireplace fenders, while not East Indian in origin, add to that brass look as they function as liquor shelves.

Instead of ordinary bar stools, the decorator chose antique bistro chairs and had them upholstered in bright blue. Carved Indonesian dance figures and puppets blend with the look of Holland as seen in the Delft pieces used as accessories.

Finally, for a floor that wouldn't notice wet feet or dancing feet, he bordered blue vinyl tiles in white striping.

THIS BAR AREA created by designer Karl Steinhauser blends the unusual flavor and charm of the Dutch East Indies with one of today's most sophisticated and versatile home-improvement products, prefinished paneling. Marlite in a tile-like design has been used on counters and on the walls as well.

Expert Advice On Air Conditioning

Almost one million American people will be buying a central air conditioning system for their homes this year, and if you are one of them, heed a few words of advice from the National Better Heating-Cooling Council.

What kind of a heating system do you have ?

IF IT IS forced warm air and when you bought the house you were told that it "would be simple to add air conditioning later" — well, watch out. When you were in high school you learned a very important principle: heated air rises and cooled air falls. This is important to remember when you make plans to add cooling.

Because cooled air falls, air conditioning outlets should be near or on the ceiling. If they are part of the heating system and are near the floor, only your ankles will be cool this summer. The rest of you will stay warm.

Another thing: cool air is heavier than warm air and needs larger ducts. Otherwise it won't get out into the room fast enough to do you much good. Some people try to compensate for small ducts by installing large fans or blowers. This creates vibration noises which can be as irritating as heat.

REGARDLESS OF the type of heating you have — forced warm air or hydronic (modern hot water) heating — the council recommends a separate, overhead air conditioning system, properly sized for the home in which it is installed.

On the other hand,if you only want to cool off a bedroom or two, there are many very good individual units on the market, either window units or through-the-wall types.

Another word of advice: keep them on all the time, otherwise they will have to work overtime catching up. If you turn them on just before you go to bed, you may not feel cool until dawn.

Marin Homeowner's Notebook

We See a Dark Cloud in Your Future.

Every homeowner in Marin County should be on the alert for a cloud of winged ant-like insects anywhere around his home. It may be a swarm of termites!

As soon as the rains end in Marin County, all three types of termites found here send out swarms of flying "kings" and "queens" to start new nests. Swarming is heavy in the early spring and fall, but continue in some degree from late February through late October.

Termite colonies send out swarms only after they've been established for three years or more. The flying reproductives can go only a short distance, seldom more than 100 feet unless helped by winds. So if you see a cloud of swarmers or their discarded wings, there's a large termite nest nearby.

There is a silver lining in that cloud of swarmers, though. The nest is still fairly small (6,000 to 10,000 termites) when the first swarms are sent out. If you detect an early swarm, therefore, you've avoided the worst damage. Later, the nests grow to 250,000 termites or more.

The three types of termites in Marin have somewhat different habits for nesting and swarming.

All three types of termites have infested homes in every part of Marin, however. So every homeowner should be alert during the swarming season. If you see a swarm or discarded wings, get help from a structural pest control expert immediately. He'll make sure nothing clouds your home's future.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've provided Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

Susan Is Charming, Unorthodox

By VERNON SCOTT

Susan St. James, the charming wife of Rock Hudson on the "McMillan and Wife" series, is the unorthodox wife off-screen of her makeup man, Tom Lucas.

Married almost a year, Susan and Tom met when she was working on the defunct "Name of the Game" series on which Lucas was a makeup artist.

They are expecting a baby in May, a fact that caused producers and writers of the NBC series to change the script.

Now, as Mrs. McMillan on the air, Susan will also become a mother. There is no other way to explain her physical condition, Susan observes.

TOM AND SUSAN live in an old two-story house in the Hollywood hills. It is rented from a friend and stands out from neighboring homes. Odd shaped windows and ancient plumbing set it apart.

"It's the kind of old-fashioned house I was brought up in back in Illinois," says Susan, who lived in Lake Forest. "The only way I can describe it is Main Street, USA."

The newlyweds are in a constant state of decorating their home, mostly with handmade furniture and bits and pieces they owned before they were married.

SUSAN IS A great believer in things natural — natural food, natural surroundings and natural childbirth.

Both she and Tom attend classes for parents-to-be in natural childbirth.

SUSAN ST. JAMES
Everything natural

Until their baby arrives the Lucas family is rounded out by a parrot named Salty, who doesn't speak a word, and a dog who answers to Kiddo.

Susan is so dedicated to natural foods that she is a total vegetarian. She cooks vegeloafs, walnut loafs and makes her own peanut butter by putting fresh-roasted peanuts through the blender.

NEITHER TOM nor Susan eat frozen or canned foods of any kind. They buy fresh vegetables and steam them.

Normally they arise at 4:30 a.m., feed the animals and prepare their own vegetable lunches for the day. Susan employs some of the time to wash and dry her hair before reporting to the studio.

They have a cup of coffee together and sometimes Tom will go out jogging before breakfast.

It is not uncommon for both of them to report at Universal Studios at 6 a.m. with shooting beginning at 8. Sometimes they work until 7:30 p.m.

BECAUSE SUSAN works longer hours than her husband, and is often exhausted when she does get home, Tom pitches in by doing some of the housework. While he's cleaning up, Susan is memorizing lines.

Almost every weekend they pack their pets and a supply of fresh vegetables into a camper and head north up the coast of California, stopping wherever the view is pleasant and the air fresh.

Susan's schedule is such that she works five days a week for 10 days and then she'll have two days off. Frequently this means a four-day weekend. On these occasions the couple drives to the Big Sur country and live in their camper.

Susan makes many of her own clothes, long cotton dresses primarily. But she's just as happy in blue jeans and a blouse.

One exception to their nomadic weekends are the Los Angeles Rams football games. They have season tickets and never missa game.

'Charlie Kissed Me'

A nationwide search to find the baby girl kissed by Charlie Chaplin in "The Great Dictator" has turned up no less than three dozen claimants to date, and the returns are still coming in to Oliver Unger, distributor of the famous Chaplin films.

About a month ago Unger announced that he was seeking the woman who, as a baby, was bussed on screen in "The Great Dictator" by Chaplin, so that she could be brought to New York to attend the re-opening of "The Great Dictator" as his special guest.

Thirty-six females responded, as of this writing, each claiming that she is the one. Their claims may be exactly alike, but their current addresses and occupation are wildly varied.

One woman is living in Kaktovik, Alaska, where she's writing a book on the Eskimos. Another writes from a logging camp in Oregon, which employs her as a cook, while a lady who gives her address as Chicago says she drives a cab for her daily bread.

Series For Malden

Karl Malden will star in "Streets of San Francisco," a dramatic television series for ABC next season.

New On The Stereo Scene —

By JOHN SUNIER

Three new multi-disc albums from Columbia Records are "heavy" in more than sheer weight on the shelf.

First is Leonard Bernstein's first major creation since he retired as regular conductor of the New York Philharmonic, his "Mass," a theater piece for singers, players and dancers — conducted by the composer on Columbia M2 31008.

The massive work was written in memory of President John F. Kennedy at the young widow's request and opened the Kennedy Center of the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., last year.

Bernstein believes the principal crisis of our time is the crisis of faith, and he has been interested for a long time in writing a comprehensive religious service incorporating elements of many faiths. Well, here it is, and Columbia's engineers deserve almost as much credit as the composer and hoards of performers for their success in tackling probably the most complex engineering job in record history.

There are a choir, a boys' choir, a street chorus, two rock bands, two electric organs, a huge percussion section, soloists and the Alvin Ailey Dance Company, as well as the full orchestra. Bernstein was surrounded by a forest of 48 "mikes" at one recording session.

Every imaginable sort of musical and theological approach is employed in the score, and yet it seems to hold together and in some sections makes a tremendous emotional effect upon the listener. The main soloist, Alan Titus, has some songs of great simplicity and chjrm as well as more traditional mass vocal passages.

ECHOES OF the Broadway stage (neo-"On The Town") are not undetectable in the musical fabric, not to mention ghosts of Bach, Orff, Stravinsky and Copland. Some of the "solos" are handled by a special quadraphonic tape played at the time of the performance, utilizing the Moog and other electronic effects.

By the way, although this album has also been made available in the new SQ four-channel system, the ordinary two-channel version has a great deal of information to feed rear pseudo-quadraphonic speakers and gives an often startling feeling of depth to the musical and physical movements of the performers.

The two-disc boxed album also comes with a lavish color-illustrated libretto which gives a good idea of what's going on visually onstage.

Bravo Bernstein, again! If his unbelievable schedule can be called a "retirement," that word needs new definition.

HARRY PARTCH is a visionary, radical composer who once lived in Marin County and used local people, untrained in music, to perform his truly fantastic musico-dramatic conceptions. After several decades of total neglect during which critics and authorities who knew of his existence called him the "Don Quixote of Music," his elaborate and complex yet often ear-beguiling scores are now being made available on records through the auspices of Columbia.

"Delusion of the Fury" (A Ritual of Dream and Delusion) is the latest. It is a two-record set on Columbia M2 30576 with the ensemble of his unique instruments — cloud chamber bowls, citheras, giant marimbas, etc. — conducted by Danlee Mitchel under Partch's direct supervision. There is also another beautifully done booklet with color illustrations of his many instruments, which are as striking as sculpture as they are as originators of unusual sound.

Partch's unique musical scale has 43 tones to the octave, and the other elements of his world are equally unorthodox. The subjects and titles of the sections with words are often very homey: "San Francisco Newsboy Cries," "And on the Seventh Day Petals Fell in Petaluma," etc.

Partch himself has said "There is nothing like my work in the modern world that I know of," and this is fairly accurate. It is almost as though we are transported to another astral plane, especially upon seeing a live performance with musicians all in costumes and the extraordinary instruments filling the stage.

A fine bonus with this fascinating album is a third LP in which Partch talks about the 27 unique instruments and his musical world.

NOT ANOTHER Tchaikovsky "First Piano Concerto," you say?

Yes, but wait: This new Columbia package (MG 30838) also very democratically brings us the Second and Third Concerti as well, and in really sparkling performances by pianist Gary Graffman.

His first is second only to Emil Gilel's (Victrola) in my opinion, and this is surely the best Second around. Rather than fuss with the doubtful arrangements of Tchaikovsky's "Third Piano Concerto" into a full three movements, this album presents only the one 15-minute-long movement — one of his most brilliant piano works.

Engineering is superb, and the double-fold package takes up lots less shelf room than the above boxed albums, a factor in small rooms accommodating ever-growing record collections.

The late George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra are heard in the First Concerto and Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia in the other two.

DRIVING HOME

Driving home
Early in the morning
In a drizzle
Over the Golden Gate Bridge
North on highway one-o-one
Up into Marin
Through the rainbow tunnel
And down Waldo Grade —
And then not seeing the silhouette
Of Mount Tamalpais,
Is just like not being there at all;
But on a clear day
When the mountain is basting
In the red light
Of the rising sun
My day is made;
I feel exhilarated,
And there is nothing like it.

MILL VALLEY — F. HENNING BAUER

OTHERS

They come and go,
Pass away,

Forms in human shape,
Waves,

From which others
Are determined,

All aging,
Matter of time!
